

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. The Gild Merchant.

ALNWICK¹.

1672, July 3.—‘It is ordered by consent of the four-and-twenty, ALNWICK that every apprentice shall be obliged, after one yeare of his entrance into his apprenticeship, to repare to the comon guild, whensoever assembled, and there shall record his time of entrance and the date of his indenture in the towne booke by the cham-berlanes, and that afterwards he shall serve within his master’s house at meat, drinke, and lodging for seven years complete, upon paine of everye one that taketh any such apprentice contrary to this order, which hath been made, as appears to us, by our predecessors in the year 1628, and now confirmed by us the day and yeare above said.’—(Tate, Alnwick, ii. 237.)

In a similar order made April 20th, 1692, the apprentice is required to ‘repare to the privet guild.’—(Ibid.)

The earliest notices in the borough accounts shew the connection between gilds and taxation: ‘1611—received in guild money and guild grots £3 7s. 4d.; 1613—received guild money £2 5s. 4d.; 1617—received the guild money at May-day last £2 6s. 6d.’ In 1613, at a meeting called a gyld, orders were made by the Four and Twenty taxing the freemen for the repairs of the Mart House, letting lands, etc.; and another order was made ‘by general consent of the Four-and-Twenty and of the aldermen and companies and of the freemen and others,’ authorising the aldermen to distrain for payment of the taxes imposed; at ‘a general guild’ orders were made for the maintenance of the schools ‘by the Four-and-Twenty, with the general consent

¹ See Tate, Alnwick, ii. 237, 269-272; Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, pp. 1414-1418; Davidson, Alnwick, 325-327

ALNWICK of all the aldermen and companies of the town and of the free men and burgesses of the same.' During the seventeenth century the term gild was applied to the more important meetings of the Four-and-Twenty, when the whole would be expected to attend; and it seems that some of these meetings were openly held in the Common Guild Hall, in the presence of the freemen, burgesses and inhabitants of the town.—(Tate, ii. 270.)

In 1629 'the custome Corne is lett by the consent of the Chamberlains and Comon Guild', and 'the Comon Guild and Four and Twenty' made regulations for settling disputes between different companies.—(Tate, ii. 271.)

At the 'general gylde' held December 29th, 1631, the new Chamberlains refused to receive the accounts of the old Chamberlains, 'to the great contempt of the whole Towne and comon gylde.' In 1633 'the Chamberlains, the 24 and the Comen Guild' agree that every freeman pay 4*d.* yearly to repair Pottergate and Clayport towers. A.D. 1649, 'granted then by the Chamberlaynes with the consent of the Four and Twenty, upon voate then passed in publique guld,' a lease of Hesleyside for seven years. Gilds were held in 1665 and 1669 which appear to have been merely meetings of the governing body; but from 1687 to 1712 gild meetings of the whole of the freemen were held by the authority of the Four-and-Twenty. (Tate, ii. 271-272.)

In 1762 the freemen contended that an agreement between the corporate body and the Duke of Northumberland was not obligatory upon them, unless it received the sanction of the 'common guild.'—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, p. 1414)

'January 13, 1628. It is ordered and agreed, by the four-and twenty and common guild of this borough, the day and year abovesaid, that the chamberlains every year, for their year being, shall call together the four-and twenty and common guild always upon the 10th of December, unless it fall on a Sunday, and then in the Tollbooth let, with the consent of the four-and-twenty and common guild, all such things as are due and belonging to the town.'—(Ibid., 1417)

In the seventeenth century the freemen appear to have had ALNWICK. the power of calling for the yearly account of the Chamberlains in open gild. The former were now only convened in gild by the twenty-four, when there were important questions to consider affecting the franchise, or in which the personal interests of the freemen were concerned. The last common gild was held about the year 1712. Since the disuse of gilds the freemen had gradually lost all participation in the conduct of affairs.—(Ibid., 1417-1418.)

ANDOVER.

‘Homines de Andeura reddunt compotum de x. marcis pro habenda eadem Libertate in Gilda sua, quam homines de Wiltona et de Saresberia habent in Gilda sua.’ Pipe Roll, 22 Henry II, Rot. 13 a.—(Madox, Firma Burgi, 27.)

‘Johannes Dei gratia, etc. Sciatis nos concessisse hominibus de Andever quod habeant gildam mercatorum in Andever, et quod sint quieti de theolonio et passagio et consuetudine per totam terram nostram, sicut burgenses Wintonie qui sunt de gilda mercatorum sunt quieti; et super hoc nullus eos injuste disturbet pro consuetudine super decem libras forisfacture, sicut carte Henrici Regis patris nostri et Regis Ricardi fratris nostri quas inde habent rationabiliter testantur. The Gild Merchant of Andover was confirmed by charters of 12 Henry III, 29 Edward III and 4 Richard II¹.

The town archives of Andover contain many records of the ancient Gild. Subjoined is a transcript of the oldest²:—

² This membrane was evidently a part of a larger Roll. It is a thin parchment, 14 by 5 inches. One entry is defaced by a number of perforations, and a corner of the MS., embracing portions of the last entries, is wanting. Otherwise the MS. is in an excellent state of preservation, the writing being very distinct.

There are several Gild Rolls and fragments of Rolls of the time of the three Edwards. Their contents consist chiefly of admissions to the Gild, as is exemplified by the following extracts from one of these parchments :—

‘Morghespeche tenta die mercurii proxima post festum sancte A.D. 1320.
Katarine Anno Regis Edwardi [III] Secundo.

Johannes Gylemyn petit quod possit dare Gildam suam Willielmo de Hungerford filio auunculi sui ,

Galfridus Molindar’ petit societatem Gildanorum.

Marger’ Conde petit quod possit dare Gildam que fuit Johannis fratris sui Willielmo filio suo.

Johanna vxor Johannis le Breghe petit Gildam que fuit Josephi de Wherewelle.

Johannes Chyre petit quod possit dare Gildam que fuit Rogeri fratris sui Nicholao fratri suo.’

There is also a Roll entitled ‘Rotulus fforwardmannorum de Domo Inferiora intitulatus Anno Regni Regis Edwardi filii Regis Edwardi Secundo,’ containing some 180 names, opposite one of which are the words ‘petit gildam que fuit Walkelini.’

Another Roll, ‘De Pacto Anno Domini Regis Edwardi septimo,’ has about 90 names with payments varying from 6*d.* to 12*d.*

On the dorse of a membrane headed ‘Scotipanyes’ (scot pennies) is the following entry:—

‘Morchespeche tenta die veneris proxima ante ffestum sancti vincencis anno Regis Edwardi [III] viii^o. A.D. 1334.

In 1835 it was still the custom to hold four quarterly head gilds during the year, which were attended by all the free burgesses; and the mayor was bound to hold a gild at any time on the demand of twelve burgesses¹. At such gilds apprentices were presented and other business transacted. In 1799 there were about 500 burgesses, but the number of the brethren on the roll was 980.—(Fuller, Berwick, 241–243.)

The 'Alderman of the year' was the principal gild clerk. At the gilds he presented the petitions for admission to freedom, and he was assistant-clerk of the market².

The Gild Books extending from 1509 to 1805 are still preserved in the town archives of Berwick. The 'Book of Meetings of Berwick' contains a reference to 'the Gildbooks for which where all the Orders of Guild, or By-laws for the government of the Corporation, are recorded.'—(Rep. MSS. Com. 18

The old laws of the haberdashers begin with this preamble :—
'Ordinances of the Guild of Merchants in Andevêr in the County of Southampton, which Guild is divided into three several Fellowships [i.e. leather-sellers, haberdashers and drapers], whereof these are only of the Fellowship of Haberdashers.' It then goes on to say that Henry III granted the men of Andover a Gild of Merchants, which whole Company has been divided into three fellowships. The Company of haberdashers included haberdashers, the alderman of merchants and twenty-one other aldermen of various crafts.—(Poulson, i. 256.)

BRIDGWATER.

The following documents are among the records of Bridgwater:
—A general pardon, 4 Henry [IV], under the Great Seal, to William Gosse, William Gascoigne, and Richard Dyut, Wardens or Stewards of the Merchants’ Gild of Bridgwater, in behalf of the Gild.—(Rep. MSS. Com. 1872, p. 311.) Two Stewards of the Gild, and the Commons of B. present a priest to the Bishop of Bath and Wells in the year 1393.—(Ibid., 314.) A conveyance by the same Stewards to Roger Satre ‘taillour’ of a tenement.
Witnesses, Humphrey Horelok and John Lombe, Provosts, John Eygod and Ralph Fysschepond, Bailiffs of the Gild there, and John Horelok, Bailiff of the Commonalty, 16 Richard II. In another conveyance two ‘Stewards of the Gild of the Community,’ two Provosts and two Bailiffs appear as witnesses, 12 Henry IV.—(Ibid., 315.)

An indenture, probably of the reign of Edward I, makes known that all the burgesses and the commonalty of Bridgwater for the promotion of love and peace have ordained that they will choose yearly two Seneschals of their Gild and one bailiff to attend on them ; such Seneschals to have power to punish those offending against these ordinances. Any one convicted before the Sene-schals for maliciously imputing certain crimes to another, shall be amerced, etc. No one shall implead another without the burgh.

BARNSTAPLE. The Third Roll begins as follows :—‘ Convocacio communitatis eorum qui sunt in libertate Burgi Barnest’ ad Guldā factam die dominica ann. [i.e. ante] festum conversionis Sancti Pauli anno regni Regis Edwardi tertii a conquestu tertio, secundum consuetudinem libertatis predicte a tempore quo non extat memoria in contrarium usitatam in dicto Burgo, Galfrido Tinctore tunc majore dicti Burgi. Nomina Officiorum [et] singularum personarum in predicta Gulda inferius expressius continentur et designantur. Videlz., Imprimis, unusquisque dicte Communitatis post postremam Guldā factam in dicta libertate ingressus et durante Gulda presente ingrediens dabit majori unum den., Ostiario unum Obolum et pincerne unum Obolum, qui pro tempore fuerint; et singuli in dicta libertate existentes qui majores tunc vel ante non fuerint vel in Officio dicte Gulde constituti, singuli solvent den. qui Scot peny vocatur.’

Then follow the names of four ‘Ferchyngmen,’ four ‘Aldermen,’ an ‘Ostiarius,’ a ‘Pincerna,’ about 180 ‘Intrinseci’ and ‘Burgenses Extrinseci.’

The names in the three Rolls include persons from various parts of the county and from towns in other counties, landowners, territorial names and lords of manors, as well as persons of the names of humble trades such as ‘Touker,’ ‘Lorimer,’ ‘Piscator,’ ‘Sutor,’ etc. There are also some women among the names.

This Fraternity, which was called the Gild of St. Nicholas, had a common seal (‘sigillum commune fratrum Nichi.’) and possessed considerable property. So soon after the Reformation ‘the chapel and hall of the Guild came into the possession of the corporation by purchase, the conveyance being dated 1584 describing the property as “the scite of the St. Nicholas, and a building called the Kay Hall” which had by a previous deed of the reign of Edward III. been granted off by the Crown under the Act for the abolition of all Gilds, Free Chapels, and Fraternal Societies, recited, which period no doubt marks also the continuance of the meetings of the society, as well as the dissolution of the chantry and fraternity.’

'Most of the Aldermen of the Guild had been Mayors, and BARNSTAPLE assuming that the Chapel of St. Nicholas (or the building called the Kay Hall in later times) was also the hall of the Guild, it is clear that it was used as a public market; for as early as 1394 there is an entry in the Borough Receiver's accounts "Paid the Keeper of St. Nicholas for the Market house, iv.d.," and this was just two centuries before it was bought by the Corporation. Payments from the town to St. Nicholas as an acquittance continued to be made down to a much later period. There are many other references to it in the Borough Records.' In an account of the Receipt of Fines, etc., 10 Edward III, there is one column headed 'Arrears of the Guild':—'From Durand le Ballon, because he did not attend, 1*s.* 10*d.*' 'From Walter Coutermann, surety, Walter atte Crosse, for the same, 4*s.*,' etc. In the Borough Receivers' Account of 1390 is this entry, 'Repaid to the Wardens or Officers of St. Nicholas for the butcher's house,' and entries of the same kind are almost regular afterwards. In 1402 the grand inquest presented, among other officers to be sworn, Wardens of the Long Bridge and two Wardens of St. Nicholas, who took their oath. At a later period there was an order, 'that all foreigners coming to the town should bring their wares to the Kay Hall, being the common Market.' 'Many other features connected with the old Hall of St. Nicholas tend to associate it with the early trade of the town.'

In a fragmentary Account Roll of the Gild, apparently dating from the early part of the fifteenth century, we find expenditures for Wax, 'Brede and Wyne,' 'vi. Prysts at derige,' 'viii. Gallons of Alle,' 'a hard Cheese,' 'Meysers, Strawbers and Hurts,' etc. In the Accounts for 1526-27 there is this item, 'For the town clerk's salary, 6*s.* 8*d.*¹'

They are then asked to declare ‘quid et cuiusmodi proficuum ipsi clamant per verba generalia in predicta carta contenta.’ Among other things they state:—‘Et per illam clausulam quod habeant Gildam mercatoriam, etc. clamant quod omnes in predicta villa manentes vel libertatibus predictis gaudere volentes et qui iurati sunt coram burgensibus predictis, et hansam, videlicet, quoddam proficuum vocatum hans, et lot et scot cum eis soluerint, erunt de Gilda predicta et tunc libere mercandizare possunt in villa predicta absque Theolonio ibidem seu alibi soluendo; et quod nullus qui non sit iuratus et admissus in gilda predicta mercandizare possit in eadem villa absque licencia et voluntate eorundem burgensium.’—(Record of Caernarvon, 158-161.)¹

BERWICK.

From the fifteenth century the history of Berwick included in that of English towns¹. James II in the year of his reign granted the burgesses a long charter, the following portion relates to the Gild:—'Et ulterius ac per presentes pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus concedimus prefato majori, ballivis et burgensibus et successoribus suis, quod ipsi et successores sui de perpetuum habeant infra burgum predictum guildam

Ita quod nullus qui non sit de gilda illa merchandizam aliquam faciat in eodem burgo, suburbiis, libertatibus, aut precinctis ejusdem burgi, nisi de voluntate et beneplacito majoris, ballivorum et burgensium ejusdem burgi. Volumus etiam, et per presentes pro nobis, heredibus et successoribus nostris concedimus prefato majori, ballivis et burgensibus burgi predicti, et successoribus suis, quod quicumque mercatores petierint burgum predictum cum mercato suo, de quocunque loco fuerint, sive extranei sive alii, qui de pace nostra fuerint, vel de licencia nostra in terram nostram venerint, veniant, morentur, et recedant in salva pace nostra, faciendo rectas consuetudines ejusdem burgi. Et quod predicti burgenses aut mercatores non occasionentur pro mistling [i. e. miskennig] in suis loquelis (viz.) si non omnia bene narraverint. In 1835 it was still the custom to hold four quarterly head gilds during the year, which were attended by all the free burgesses; and the mayor was bound to hold a gild at any time on the demand of twelve burgesses¹. At such gilds apprentices were presented and other business transacted. In 1799 there were about 500 burgesses, but the number of the brethren on the gild roll was 980.—(Fuller, Berwick, 241–243.)

The 'Alderman of the year' was the principal gild officer. At the gilds he presented the petitions for admission to freedom, and he was assistant-clerk of the market².

The Gild Books extending from 1509 to 1805 are still preserved in the town archives of Berwick. The 'Book of Merchants of Berwick' contains a reference to 'the Gildbooks from which where all the Orders of Guild, or By-laws for the government of the Corporation, are recorded.'—(Rep. MSS. Com. 187

BEVERLEY.

The Gild Merchant of Beverley is mentioned in charters of BEVERLEY Thurstan and William, Archbishops of York, Henry I, Henry II, Richard I, John, Richard II and Elizabeth¹. It is called the 'Hanshus' in the charter of Thurstan:—'Volo ut burgenses mei de Beverlaco habeant suam hanshus, quam eis do et concedo ut ibi sua statuta pertractent ad honorem Dei et Sancti Johannis et canonicorum et ad totius villatus emendationem, eadem libertatis lege sicut illi de Eboraco habent in sua hanshus.'—(Poulson, i. 51; Foedera, i. 10.) In the confirmations of this charter by Henry I and Archbishop Wilham (temp. Stephen) the term
'Merchant Gild' is used for 'hanshus':—

The following is one of several statutes made at Beverley in BEVERLEY. the year 1493:—‘Also yat every burges of the town of Beverley be fre to bye and to sell hys awne gudes so that he kepe no oppyn shopp in retayling, nor no man to by any maner of marchandyse for redy money to sell it agayne in retaylyng bott it sall be presentyd by the alderman of marchants to the xii. governors for the yere beyng. BRIDGWATER.

The following documents are among the records of Bridgwater:—A general pardon, 4 Henry [IV], under the Great Seal, to William Gosse, William Gascoigne, and Richard Dyut, Wardens or Stewards of the Merchants’ Gild of Bridgwater, in behalf of the Gild.—(Rep. MSS. Com. 1872, p. 311.) Two Stewards of the Gild, and the Commons of B. present a priest to the Bishop of Bath and Wells in the year 1393.—(Ibid., 314.) A conveyance by the same Stewards to Roger Satre ‘tailleur’ of a tenement. Witnesses, Humphrey Horelok and John Lombe, Provosts, John Eygod and Ralph Fysschepond, Bailiffs of the Gild there, and John Horelok, Bailiff of the Commonalty, 16 Richard II. In another conveyance two ‘Stewards of the Gild of the Community,’ two Provosts and two Bailiffs appear as witnesses, 12 Henry IV.—(Ibid., 315.)

An indenture, probably of the reign of Edward I, makes known that all the burgesses and the commonalty of Bridgwater for the promotion of love and peace have ordained that they will choose yearly two Seneschals of their Gild and one bailiff to attend on them; such Seneschals to have power to punish those offending against these ordinances. Any one convicted before the Seneschals for maliciously imputing certain crimes to another, shall be amerced, etc. No one shall implead another without the burgh.

BRIDGWATER. Any one summoned by the bailiff to appear before the Seneschals and neglecting to do so, is to be amerced ; also any one opposing execution or distress made by order of the Seneschals. No flesh or fried fish shall be bought for the purpose of retailing before 9 A.M. The Seneschals of St. Mary's and of the Holy Cross and the Warden of the bridge of Bridgwater shall render account of moneys arising therefrom to the said Seneschals. All penalties are to be levied by the bailiff. The Seneschals are to render a yearly account of all moneys received by them.—(Ibid. 316.)

The following entries occur in the Rolls of the Receiver, or Bailiff of the Commonalty of Bridgwater (22 Henry VI) :—‘ VII.s. VI.d. received of Richard Cloptone for having the freedom of the gild.’ ‘ From John Eremyte for his fine upon having his freedom, VIII.s.’ ‘ From John Eleys, smith, for having his freedom, IV.s.’ ‘ XII.d. received of Richard Forde, corviser, for following his craft this year.’—(Odgers, MS. Accounts of Bridgwater, 41.)

BRISTOL.

The charter of John, Earl of Moreton, granted among other things :—‘ Quod nullus extraneus mercator emat infra villam d' homine extraneo coria, blada vel lanam nisi de burgensibus ; et quod nullus extraneus habeat tabernam nisi in navi, nec vendat pannum ad decisionem nisi in nundinis ; et quod nullus extraneus moretur in villa cum mercibus suis propter merces suas vendendas nisi per quadraginta dies et quod habeant rationabiles gildas suas, sicut eas melius habuerunt temporis Roberti et Willelmi filii sui comitum Gloucestriae.’—(Seyer, Ch 8-9.)

‘ It appears by the Great Red Book of Bristol, p. 30, that the mayor, bailiffs and commonalty had a free guild of merchandise in the town and suburb, from time beyond the memory of man. All things belonging to a guild, viz. : to buy and sell in the town freely and quietly from all toll and customs, and the liberties belonging to them, and for the whole time used a certain fine (or praestacionem) to their own use from were admitted into the liberties and society of the said guild, to BRISTOL.

have the liberty aforesaid according to what could be agreed reasonably between them ;—the guild was confirmed in their liberties by John Earl of Moreton, afterwards King John, and by William Earl of Gloucester.’—(Barrett, Bristol, 179.)

Robert Aurifaber in 1235 granted the rent charge upon two stone houses, opposite St. Nicholas church, for the chaplain celebrating mass in the said church, the chaplain to be chosen by the mayor and the steward of the Merchants’ Company.—(Nicholls and Taylor, Bristol, i. 119.) The ‘Seneschallos Gildae Mercatorum’ are mentioned in another deed of 1240.—(Barrett, 516.)

The ‘Consuetudines Villae Bristolliae’ (about the year 1314) assert ‘that out of the profits of the Gild of Merchants and of the town they support eight bridges, the pavement or pitching, five conduits of water, the Key before the ships, and the public officers.’—(Barrett, p. vii.)

Nicholls and Taylor (i. 152–158) give a long account of what they call a contest between the Merchant Gild and the crafts in the year 1312. In the original documents, copies of which are printed in Seyer’s Memoirs, ii. 88–94, neither the Gild nor the crafts are mentioned. It was simply an uprising of the mass of the burgesses, headed by principal men of the commonalty (‘majores communitatis’), against the usurpations of fourteen of the burgesses, who assumed too great authority in the management of the revenues of the town.—(Seyer, ii. 95, 96.)

In the 7th year of Edward IV, William Canynges being mayor, the following ordinances were made for merchants, according to the custom from time immemorial :—

1. The mayor and council fifteen days after Michaelmas were to call a council and to choose from them a person that hath been mayor or sheriff, to be master of the fellowship of merchants, and to choose two merchants for wardens, and two beedles to occupy as beedles and brokers to be attendant the said year upon the said masters and wardens, etc.

2. The master and fellowship to have at their will the chapel

BEDFORD.

Richard I, Henry III, Richard II and Henry IV granted charters to the burgesses of Bedford in which the Gild Merchant is mentioned². The certificate from which the above grants were taken, is dated January 28th, [1389], and contains in all eight charters to the burgesses of Burford. The first one on the membrane is that of 'Robertus filius Hamonis,' but a portion of it has disappeared:—'Robertus Hamonis filius omnibus suis hominibus et amicis salutem. Volo . . . de Oxenford', videlicet, vt vnusquisque domum suam et terram . . . vxore vel de quolibet alio absque ipsius domini requisicione heredem facere . . . Gildam mercatorum. Et adhuc concedo vt quicunque ad mercatum . . . preter lanam et corea, nisi homines istius ville.' The certificate throws no further light on the history of the Gild; the few explanatory words with which it ends are partially obliterated:—'Qui quidem burgenses et omnes predecessores . . . consuetudines et libertates prescriptas habuerunt et eis vti et gaudere consueuerunt spectant . . . catalla ad predictam gildam.'

Contigit autem, quod quidem libere tenens de celerario, extra portam manens, Ketel nomine, latrocinio calumniatus et duello victus, suspensus erat. Dolebat autem conventus propter opprobria burgensium, dicentium quod, si esset homo ille manens infra burgum, non pervenisset ad duellum, sed juramentis vicinorum suorum se adquietasset, sicut libertas est eorum qui manent infra burgum. In 1835 it was still the custom to hold four quarterly head gilds during the year, which were attended by all the free burgesses and the mayor was bound to hold a gild at any time on demand of twelve burgesses¹. At such gilds apprentices presented and other business transacted. In 1799 there about 500 burgesses, but the number of the brethren on the roll was 980.—(Fuller, Berwick, 241–243.)

The 'Alderman of the year' was the principal gild. At the gilds he presented the petitions for admission to freedom, and he was assistant-clerk of the market².

The Gild Books extending from 1509 to 1805 are still in the town archives of Berwick. The 'Book of M of Berwick contains a reference to 'the Gildbooks where all the Orders of Guild, or By-laws for the governance of the Corporation, are recorded.'—(Rep. MSS. Com. 18

Gild.—(Rep. MSS. Com. 1872, p. 311.) Two Stewards of the

An indenture, probably of the reign of Edward I, makes known that all the burgesses and the commonalty of Bridgwater for the promotion of love and peace have ordained that they will choose yearly two Seneschals of their Gild and one bailiff to attend on them ; such Seneschals to have power to punish those offending
against these ordinances. Any one convicted before the Sene-

The following is a translation of the above :—This is the exchange between the convent of Christ-Church and the ‘cnihts’ of Canterbury of the Chapman’s Gild. The society of the Chapman’s Gild puts into the hands of the convent eight houses within Burgate, with sac and soc, as they themselves enjoy them. And the convent puts into their hands, on the other side, nine houses, two without Readingate. In one of them dwelleth Aelfric ; and in the other, Bruman. The other seven are within Newingate. In them dwell Siward Cutfert and Brithric and Golwine and Hereword and William and Wulfgeve and Alfwine, with sac and soc as the convent enjoys them. Thereunto is witness Anselm Archbishop and the convent (hired) at Christ Church and Calveal Portreve and the elders of the society. To show this the convent has one writing and the society another.

The Gild of Carlisle was confirmed by Henry II, Henry III, Edw. I, Edw. II, Edw. III and Rich. II¹. Had it been used at all, it would probably have been applied to the eight gilds aggregately, rather than to the Corporation.

'We find, that before the said City had any Charter they used by Prescription divers Liberties, and enjoyed a Guild Mercatory, that is, a Brotherhood of Merchants, and that whosoever was not admitted of that Society, he could not use any Trade or Traffick within the City, nor be a Tradesman therein. And the Tenour of this Guild Mercatory did ever run in these words, Sicut hactenus usi fuerint, and was after confirmed under the Earls Seal. And there was appointed two Overseers, and those were appointed out of the chiefest of the Citizens, and were greatly respected of the Citizens, as Officers that had the speciall care of maintaining those priviledges; and did receive for the City all the summes of money paid by strangers for custome of Merchandize brought either by Sea or Land, except it were at the Fairs, which then were, as some say, three in the year, at Midsommer, Michaelmasse, and Martlemas. A continuance of the same Officers, and, as many suppose, the same name of those Officers remaineth to this day in the Leave-lookers, who then were the Head and chief of the Citizens before a Maior was ordained, and still is reputed the head or chief of the fourty, or the Common-Councell of the City, and are chosen usually of the best ability of the same fourty, as may expend and make provision in such matters as belong to the honour and dignity of the City and to look to the profits and commodities of the City in such Customs and Duties as fall due by importations of mer-

'And though the Office of Custos guild. Mercator. be not found of any record before this year [1297], yet it is like the said Office hath been ever since there was a guild. Mercator. These be the very same that supplied the Office that our Leave-lookers do now, which was to give Licence and compound with any that came either to buy or sell within these Liberties contrary to our grants, as may appear by sundry books of their accompts, and did disburse for Wine given and sent, for reparations of buildings and other things pertaining to the City, for as yet there were not any Treasurers, nor of long time after; *besides, if any did dwell in the City that were not free, if they did ever buy or sell within the Liberties, they did likewise compound with the Custos and Mercator [Custos Gilde Mercatorie] by the year. And whereas* now the Leave-lookers do gather two pence half penny upon the pound, of all Wares sold by Forraigners within the City, it is likely that Custom began when the Murage was granted, and so levied; for before that time they agreed as they thought good.'—(Ibid., 167-168.)

In MS. Harley 2057, fol. 16, this same explanation of the office of leave-looker occurs; but the words included within the asterisks read thus:—'besides if any dwelled within this Cittie that were not free and either sould or boughte to sell within this Cittie, etc., they did likewise compound with the Custos gilde mercatorie by the yeare, otherwise they might not be suffered to retaile every thinge; and whereas,' etc.

In 1823 the duty of the leave-lookers, according to Hanshall, was 'to prevent infringements on the rights of the Citizens by strangers exercising any trades within the liberties, to examine the markets and receive all customs, etc. due to the Corporation.'—(Co. of Chester, 180.) 'The Leave-lookers are also appointed annually by the Mayor for the purpose of collecting the duty of

The following is from a grant made by Prince Edward (32 Edw. III) to St. Mary's Nunnery, Chester:—‘Omnes homines et tenentes dictarum monialium ad voluntatem vel ad terminum annorum qui non sunt infra Gildam mercatoriam civitatis nostrae Cestriae vel jurati ad libertatem ejusdem villae, non ponantur super juratis,’ etc.—(*MS. ‘Ye liberties of ye Cittie of Chester by prescription before ye Cittizens had any Charter graunted.—Before they had any Charter to be shewed, yt is apparant that ye Cittie of Chester by prescription vused and enioyed dyuers liberties and a Gylde marcatorie, viz., a brotherhood, of which Companie whoesoe were not could not vse trafficke, or trade within ye Cittie, which appeareth by Auncient Rowles of Recorde, wherein is contayned viz., hoc anno subscripto intrauerunt in Guyldam marcatoriam Ciuitatis predictae.’—(MS. Harley 2016, fol. 31.) The same manuscript, the handwriting of which appears to be of the early part of the seventeenth century, contains several entries of fines paid by persons for being ‘made free’ of the City in the year 36 Henry VIII,—‘admissus fuit ad libertatem et ffranchias Ciuitatis predictae³,’ which was doubtless the equivalent of the ancient expression ‘intrauit in Gildam mercatoriam.’—(Ibid., fol. 33.)

CHESTER. 'By ye custome of ye said Citty vsed by all the tyme whereof ye memory of man was not to ye Contrary, no person or persons might vse any trade, misterie or occupacion within ye said Citty or ye libertye thereof, vnlesse such person were a free man of ye said Citty and admitted and made free of the Company and Society of such trade as he would vse.'—Common Hall Assembly, April 1623.—(MS. Harley 2091, ff. 91-92.) There are many documents among the Harleian MSS. exhibiting the status of the various crafts, which succeeded to the functions of the ancient Gild Merchant of Chester¹.

In the year 1766 the City authorities still attempted to enforce the ancient custom, 'That no person whatsoever, not being free of the said City, might or ought to sell or put to sale any wares or merchandizes within the city or the liberties thereof by retail; or keep any open or inner or other place or room for shew, sale or putting to sale of any wares or merchandizes by retail; or to use or exercise any art, occupation, mystery or handicraft within the same city; the time of fairs excepted.'—(J. Burrow, Reports of Cases, Lond. 1790, p. 1847.)

CHESTERFIELD.

The following is taken from the charter of John Wake to his A.D. 1204. men of Chesterfield (22 Edward I):—'Nullus alius praeterquam burgenses vlnabit, secabit, aut emdet [i.e. vendet] pannos lineos vel laneos, nec coreas vel pelles virides, crudas, recentes aut saliccas emat in mercato vel infra villam de Cestrefeud' . . . Among the gild returns of 1388-1389 was one from the Gild of the Blessed Mary, whose members swore to maintain the liberties of Chesterfield and to go forth to do the business of the town; and another from the Gild of the Holy Cross of the Merchants of Chesterfield.—(English Gilds, 165-169.)

The Gild Merchant of Chichester is also mentioned in charters

CHICHESTER of 30 Henry VI and 15 Jac. I. Besides the 'Citizens' who constituted the Common Council, there used to be 'Freemen' of Chichester. The latter had no voice in the town meetings, admission into this class being considered a mere compliment; but they had a share in the elective franchise. An entry made in the town records in 1821 states 'that the individual is admitted to the freedom of the merchant guild within the city. The oath of admission is, that the person admitted shall be a true and faithful free citizen and maintain the merchant guild.'—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, pp. 715, 716, 719.)

CONWAY.

Quo warranto proceedings, similar to those against Beaumaris described above, were brought against Conway, Bela, Newburgh, Carnarvon, Harlech, and Crukyn (temp. Edw. III). In most of these cases the clause explaining the Gild is as follows:—'Et per illam clausulam, quod habeant gildam mercatoriam, etc. clamant quod omnes in predicta villa manentes et libertatibus eiusdem gaudere volentes erunt Jurati coram eisdem burgensibus ad jura et libertates eiusdem ville iuste manutenendas, etc., et dabunt ad communem vtilitatem ville quandam custumam vocatam hans. Et postquam hoc fecerint et lot et scot cum eis soluerint, erunt liberi Burgenses, etc. et libere possunt ibidem emere et vendere et omnibus priuelegiis et libertatibus eiusdem ville gaudere absque contradiccione alicuius.'—(Record of Caernarvon, 165.)¹

Willm. Preston and John Smyth, Wardens of the Drapers and Taylors, John Chappell and Thomas Fitzall, Wardens of the Mercers. In witnes wherof, etc.'—(MS. Harley, 1565, fol. 39.)

On the preceding page of the same MS. are the arms of the borough.—'These armes are belonging and apertaining to the Maior, Aldermen and Burgesses of the Towne and Borough of the Devyses Edward Haynes, Maior.' The names of the Coroner, Aldermen and other town officers follow.

There is a 'Booke of Constitucions, Decrees, Statutes and Ordenaunces for the Fraternity, Companye and feloweshippe of the Drapers,' enacted by the Mayor and Common Council of Devizes in the year 1614. It begins with a confirmation by the Mayor, Town-Clerk and Burgesses of the various Constitutions therein contained for the government of the Guild, 'setting forth that whereas the Mayor and Burgesses by ancient custom, and by divers grants and confirmations of sundry the Kings of England, have and enjoy, among other privileges, a Guild of Merchants, and whereas the King (James I) by Letters Patent, bearing date at Westminster, July 10th, in the 3rd year of his reign, hath not only confirmed to them their former privileges, but granted them power to make new ones from time to time. At a general assembly held in the Guildhall, June 17th, 1614, it is ordained that the Guild of Merchants shall be divided into three several fraternities, companies, or fellowships,'—the Drapers, Mercers, and Leathersellers. The Company of Drapers shall choose annually a Master and two Wardens. All exercising the trades of clothiers, weavers, woollen-drapers, tailors, hosiers, fullers, shearmen, spinsters, coopers, carpenters, masons, tilers, joiners, cutlers, smiths, and ironmen within the borough shall join the Fraternity of Drapers.
The only 'constitution' of particular interest to us is the following: 'No foreigner or stranger, not being a Burgess or inhabitant of the Borough and free of the Fraternity, to sell within the Borough, except on fair days, any commodities appertaining to either of the trades included by the Fraternity other than

DEVIZES. corn, grain, victuals, wool, woollen or linen yarn, woollen or — linen cloth of their own making, upon pain of forfeiture for every offense, forty shillings.' The Fraternity of the Mercers, whose ordinances were similar to those of the Drapers, included the mercers, grocers, linen drapers, haberdashers, vintners, innholders, bakers, brewers, apothecaries, barbers, surgeons, chandlers, painters, brasiers, and glaziers.—(Kite, Guild of Merchants in Devizes, 162–171.)

The preamble of certain ordinances, made by the Common
A.D. 1614. Council of Devizes in the year 12 Jac. I and confirmed circa 1628, begins thus :—'Whereas the Major and Burgesses of this Burrough of Devizes by antient custome time out of mind used and had within the same Burrough and also by force and vertue of Divers Grants and confirmacions of Sundry of the Noble Kings and Queens of England, Progenitors of our Sovereign Lord King Charles King's Majestie that now is, have and enioye, among many other customes, liberties, franchises and immunities within the foresaid Burrough, a Guilde of Marchants, and have all the time whereof there is no Memory of Man to the Contrary used to make, ordeine and constitute good and wholesome Lawes, Ordinaunces and Statutes, fit, wholsome, profitable and necessary for the well Ordering, good Rule and Goverment of the said Burrough and of the Burgesses, Artificers, inhabitants and resiants within the same.'—(Devizes Register, Lansdowne MS. 230, fol. 18.)

DORCHESTER.

A.D. 1629. Charles I in the fifth year of his reign granted the burgesses a charter, declaring them a free borough and body corporate and politic by the name of the mayor, bailiffs, aldermen and burgesses of the borough of Dorchester; the two bailiffs, six aldermen and six other burgesses to form the common council; no merchant, artificer, etc. unless he be a free burgess or inhabitant, to exercise any art, nor to have any shop or standing to vend any wares, except at fairs or markets, etc. The inhabitants of the borough are constituted a body corporate politic by the name of the governor, assistants and freemen, who DORCHESTER.

shall be capable of purchasing and receiving lands in fee, etc. ;
to have a common seal ; to constitute a governor of the freemen ; and twenty-four of the freemen to be chosen, called the common council of the freemen, to be assistants to the governor touching their commerce ; the governor and four assistants to be chosen out of the twenty-four by the freemen, and five other assistants by the mayor out of the capital burgesses ; to hold four courts yearly, to admit any men to the liberty of the borough, and four other courts yearly to consult concerning the markets ; the governor and assistants to make laws for the good government of the markets and all societies of arts, mysteries and of all merchants and artificers, etc., to fine delinquents, etc. ; the governor to be chosen yearly by the freemen, etc., etc. ¹—(Hutchins, Dorset, 3rd edition, ii. 349.)

At a special court of the governor, assistants and freemen of the borough of Dorchester, held Sept. 24th, 1630, it was agreed by the court that the tradesmen and handicraftsmen of the borough should be divided into five companies, viz.—I. Merchants, comprising the merchants, mercers, grocers, haberdashers of small wares, linen drapers, apothecaries, booksellers, upholsterers, button-makers, barber surgeons. II. Clothiers, comprising the clothiers, woolen drapers, haberdashers of hats, weavers, dyers, tailors, hosiers, feltmakers, clothworkers, weavers, borellers. III.
Ironmongers, including the ironmongers, goldsmiths, pewterers, smiths, cutlers, plumbers, gunners, painters, glaziers, needle-makers, pin-makers, card-makers, clock-makers, brasiers, tinkers.
IV. Fishmongers, including brewers, malters, bakers, innholders, alehouse-keepers, joiners, carpenters, vintners, coopers, butchers, cooks, masons, helliers, thatchers, ‘seviders,’ mill-wrights, wheelers, fishmongers, fletchers. V. Shoemakers and Skinners, comprising the shoemakers, tanners, glovers, chandlers, skinners, furriers, pointmakers, parchment-makers, sadlers, curriers, purse-makers, collar-makers, ropers. At the same meeting it was agreed that the

ence long before the grant of this charter (Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, p. 1275).

DURCHESTER. ~~wardens~~ of the said companies (there was one warden for each of the five companies) shall attend all of the Governor's courts held during the year, and shall inquire concerning all oppressions and abuses in trading within the compass of their ward, either by foreigners or by freemen, their report being submitted in writing to the Governor.—(Hutchins, ii. 338–339.)

‘These companies have become extinct ; but the corporation of the governor, assistants and freemen still meet every year on the Monday after Michaelmas, and hold a court at which a governor and assistants are chosen, and any respectable inhabitants of the borough who may apply, are admitted to their freedom.’—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, p. 1275.)

DROGHEDA.

In the year 1229 Henry III granted :—‘Quod villa nostra de Drogheda versus Uriel liber burgus sit imperpetuum, et quod burgenses ejusdem burgi habeant geldam mercatoriam cum hansa et aliis libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus ad gildam illam pertinentibus. Et quod nullus qui non sit de gelda illa mercandisam aliquam in predicto burgo faciat, nisi de voluntate eorundem burgensium. Concessimus eciam eis quod nullus extraneus mercator pannos in predicto burgo ad decisionem vendat, vel vina ad brocham, nisi in grosso.’—(Gilbert, Documents of Irel., 93–95.)¹

Another charter of 1253 contains the clause :—‘Et quod nullus extraneus mercator moram faciat in eodem burgo cum mercandis suis, pro mercimoniis vendendis, ultra quadraginta dies.’—(Ibid., 133.)

James I in 1609 granted to the corporation that there should be a gild of merchants of the staple in the town and county ; the mayor, sheriffs, burgesses, and commons of the town yearly to choose the mayor and constables of the gild ; no merchants except those of the staple to buy or sell any merchandise of the staple within the county, nor ship them unless purchased of merchant of the staple in the town; the mayor, constables, and merchants of the staple to make bye-laws; none to sell or buy by retail or private bargain any merchandise within the franchises, except merchants of the town and county. By another charter of 1618 the mayor, sheriffs, burgesses, and commons were allowed to divide and distinguish themselves into different gilds and fraternities, according to their conditions, arts, and mysteries, each with its own hall, master, wardens, etc.; all the gilds were to be governed and directed by the mayor.—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, Ireland, pp. 810–811.)

In 1672 it was enacted that all foreigners, who then were, or should be, resident merchants, traders, artisans, etc. should, on their request and on payment of twenty shillings each, be admitted a freeman of all or any separate gild during his residence and should have and enjoy all privileges and immunities of trading, buying, working, and selling in as large and ample a manner as any freeman.—(D'Alton, Drogheda, i. 195.) This law applied to 'any city, walled town, or corporation' of Ireland.—(Rules, Orders, etc. by the Lord Lieut. and Council, p. 7 et passim.)

DUBLIN.

Earl John in 1192 granted the citizens of Dublin, among other liberties:—'Quod nullus extraneus mercator emat infra ciuitatem de homine extraneo blada, vel coria, vel lanam, nisi de ciuibus. Et quod nullus extraneus habeat tabernam de uino, nisi in nauis. . . . Et quod nullus extraneus uendat pannos in ciuitate ad decisionem. Et quod nullus extraneus mercator moretur in villa cum mercibus suis, pro mercibus suis uendendis, nisi per XL. dies. . . . Item quod habeant omnes rationabiles gildas suas, sicut burgenses de Bristoll' habent, uel melius habere consueuerunt.'—(Gilbert, Documents of Irel., 53–54.)¹

Among the records of Dublin there are various ancient Rolls of

DUBLIN. the Gild Merchant. The oldest probably date from the close of the twelfth century and consist of six membranes, each containing on the average about 275 names. Opposite each name is placed a sum of money varying from two to eleven shillings. Many are described as ordinary craftsmen,—‘tannator,’ ‘carnifex,’ ‘cirotecarius,’ ‘lorimer,’ etc.; many are from towns in England,—‘de Oxonia,’ ‘de Wintonia,’ ‘de Bristollo,’ etc.¹ A similar Roll of the year 1226 begins thus:—‘Hii subscripti intrauerunt in gildemercaturam, Roberto Pollard et Petro de Ballimor existentibus prepositis, anno regni regis Henrico decimo.’ It contains about 220 names, each person paying nine or ten shillings². Two other membranes of the years 1256 and 1257 have a similar heading. One contains 64 names, the other 140. Among them are the following:—Ricard le chapman; Adam blundus de Ardras, tannator; Rogerus de Winton, coruisarius; Ricardus de London, cordewanarius, Robertus de Eborak, parmentarius; Hugo tannator, de Louethe; Nicolaus de London, pelliparius, Unfridus de la Velde, carnifex, etc.³. There are also various lists of names (A.D. 1225–1250), with headings similar to the following:—‘Hii subscripti intrauerunt in libertate ciuitatis, Philippo filio Stephani, Elia Burel existentibus prepositis’⁴.

The records of the transactions of the Gild from the reign of Edward IV to the year 1824 are very copious. The matters alluded to in the above ordinances are discussed again and again. The few extracts given below have been selected with a view to throw further light upon the functions of the Fraternity and its relations to the municipal authorities.

fol. 24. Oct. 21, 1583.—No brother shall have more than

or more than one wine-cellar to retail wine and other merchant wares.

July 18, 1586.—It is agreed by assembly that every stranger bringing merchandise to this City to be sold shall bring the same to the Common Hall or Common Cellar; and, further, the merchant stranger shall be taken by the Wardens or Clerks before the Masters and Wardens of the Gild, to depose whether he brought any more goods than the quantity placed in the Common Cellar. The Clerks to keep a book having an account of every man's goods; nor shall they permit any goods to be sold to any persons but brethren of the Gild, nor even to them without licence from one of the Masters and Wardens. The Clerks are to take notice of what every brother buys, to the end that none of those goods be sold to any but a brother of this house, nor be retailed in those places but by way of distribution among the brethren. Four or six brethren are to watch the landing of wares coming to this river, to the end that they may be brought to the places appointed.

May 27, 1603.—It being found that the law passed in 1597, repealing the law forbidding any brother from trading directly with strangers, was to the detriment of the Gild, by which innovation certain brethren were enabled to buy up commodities which they refused afterwards to dispose of but at excessive prices, it was agreed in an assembly of the Gild that the ancient law for buying and distributing commodities coming to this City shall be established. Henceforth the Masters, Wardens and Buyers shall buy and bargain for all merchandise coming to the City to the use of the whole Brotherhood, to be distributed among them according to place or calling. No brother shall from henceforth buy or bargain with any foreigner or other person not of the Gild for any merchandise brought to this City to be sold, without special license from the Masters and Wardens, upon pain of £100. Neither shall the Masters and Wardens make any bargain for their own account, but only for the benefit of the whole Brotherhood, neither shall they refuse any bargain without the consent of a competent number of the Brotherhood.

In June, 1702, the Lord Mayor of Dublin issued a 'Declaration,' of which the following is an abstract²:—

Complaints having been made by the several corporations of the City that persons not free of the City or of any guild or fraternity of the same exercise their trades and sell by retail 'to the great prejudice of Her Majesties subjects, for that such sort of intruders are generally unskill'd in the trades and mysteries they profess, and have been often detected of apparent fraud and deceitful practices in their way of dealing,' the Lord Mayor publishes the by-laws prohibiting such practices. ‘ A short State of the Case of the Corporation of Trinity Guild, Dublin, with an alphabetical list of the Freeman and also of the Council of the House, belonging to the Corporation who are a Freeman thereof ’ was printed by E. Bate, in George's Lane Dublin, in 1749. It reads thus :—

‘ That King Henry the VIth, in the 29th Year of his Reig incorporated the Merchants of the City of Dublin, and gave th several Privileges, gave them a Power to chuse every Year

Masters and two Wardens, to make By-Laws for the better Gov- DUBLIN.
ernment of the Corporation, and also to repeal them as Occasion required.

That Charter was by a new Charter granted to the Corporation by Queen Elizabeth in the 19th Year of her Reign confirmed, and further Priviledges and Immunities granted to them by the Name of the Masters, Wardens, Brethren and Sisters of the Fraternity or Guild of the Holy Trinity, Dublin.

They have made and ordained many By-Laws for their Government, appointed four Quarter Assemblys of the Corporate Body to be held Yearly, viz. Michaelmas, Christmas, Easter and Midsummer, on particular Days.

The Master and Wardens are to serve for one Year only, to commence from their Michaelmas Quarter Assembly Day, at which time they are to be sworn.

There has been a Custom Annually, to appoint a Council of the House in the Nature of a Committee to prepare all the necessary Business to be laid before the Corporation at their Assembly.

This Council has for many years past been appointed by the Masters and Wardens pursuant to an Order made at every Michaelmas Quarter Assembly empowering them to name such Council.

The Masters and Wardens have usually in pursuance of such Order appointed a Council of the House Yearly, and have constantly named the Lord Mayor, all the Aldermen, the Sheriffs and Sheriffs Peers, the Masters and Wardens, and all their Peers and thirty-one more out of the Corporate Body to be of the Council of the House.

There is not any written By-Laws of the Corporation empowering this Council to act in the Election of any of the Offices of the Corporation, or in the returns to be made of Persons to serve in the Common Council of the City of Dublin pursuant to the New Rules.

Yet the Council of the House have taken upon them a right to fix on such Persons as they think proper to serve in the several Offices of the Masters and Wardens, and now insist that

DUBLIN. the Corporation is bound to elect their Masters and Wardens out — of the returns made by them.

They exercise a power of returning Persons to serve in the Common Council of the City, which is of the greatest Consequence not only to the Corporation, but to the City in general, without ever applying to the Corporation for their Consent or Approbation.

They now insist that they have a right so to do by Custom, and that the Corporate Body is bound by their Transactions therein.

The reasonableness of those Powers as insisted on by the Council of the House in Opposition to the Corporate Body, is left to [the] Consideration of every Freeman.

If they are thought reasonable, then let such Council be vested with those powers by Act of the Assembly.

If they are thought unreasonable, then the Corporate Body have a Right to reassume the power to themselves, and repeal all such Customs.

It now only remains that every Freeman consider whether the Customs and usages thus exercised by the Council of the House are consistent with the freedom of the Corporation, or whether the Corporation are desirous to be restored to their original right under the Charter for Electing such Persons as they think most proper to serve the Office of Master and Wardens out of the Corporate Body without restraint of the Council of the House. And also to the right of nominating such persons as they think most proper to serve in the Common Council of the City, or leave it to the Council of the House to nominate for them as heretofore.'

there were about 900 brethren.—(Munic. Corp. Com., 1836, Dublin,

¹ The staplers are frequently mentioned in the Egerton MS. (ff. 18, 21 b, 34, 37 b, 90, and see above, pp. 71, 74, 76). The staple was evidently regulated by the Gild, though distinct from the latter. In 1617 the Gild is called 'the brotherhood of this guild and staple,'—Egerton MS. 1765, fol. 37 b. The staple may be regarded as a section of the Gild Merchant, consisting of the wealthier brethren.

fol. 24. Oct. 21, 1583.—No brother shall have more than one shop or more than one wine-cellar to retail wine and other merchant du wares.

July 18, 1586.—It is agreed by assembly that every stranger for bringing merchandise to this City to be sold shall bring the same to the Common Hall or Common Cellar; and, further, the merchant stranger shall be taken by the Wardens or Clerks before the Masters and Wardens of the Gild, to depose whether he brought any more goods than the quantity placed in the Common Cellar. The Clerks to keep a book having an account of every man's goods; nor shall they permit any goods to be sold to any persons but brethren of the Gild, nor even to them without licence from one of the Masters and Wardens. The Clerks are to take notice of what every brother buys, to the end that none of those goods be sold to any but a brother of this house, nor be retailed in those places but by way of distribution among the brethren. Four or six brethren are to watch the landing of wares coming to this river, to the end that they may be brought to the places appointed.

May 27, 1603.—It being found that the law passed in 1597, for repealing the law forbidding any brother from trading directly with strangers, was to the detriment of the Gild, by which innovation certain brethren were enabled to buy up commodities which they refused afterwards to dispose of but at excessive prices, it was agreed in an assembly of the Gild that the ancient law for buying and distributing commodities coming to this City shall be established. Henceforth the Masters, Wardens and Buyers shall buy and bargain for all merchandise coming to the City to the use of the whole Brotherhood, to be distributed among them according to place or calling. No brother shall from henceforth buy or bargain with any foreigner or other person not of the Gild for any merchandise brought to this City to be sold, without special license for from the Masters and Wardens, upon pain of £100. Neither shall the Masters and Wardens make any bargain for their own account, but only for the benefit of the whole Brotherhood, neither shall they refuse any bargain without the consent of a competent number of the Brotherhood.

Oct. 22, 1577.—The brethren of the Gild are not to retai wines at more than certain specified prices.

fol. 24. Oct. 21, 1583.—No brother shall have more than one shop

or more than one wine-cellar to retail wine and other merchant wares.

July 18, 1586.—It is agreed by assembly that every stranger for bringing merchandise to this City to be sold shall bring the same to the Common Hall or Common Cellar; and, further, the merchant stranger shall be taken by the Wardens or Clerks before the Masters and Wardens of the Gild, to depose whether he brought any more goods than the quantity placed in the Common Cellar. The Clerks to keep a book having an account of every man's goods; nor shall they permit any goods to be sold to any persons but brethren of the Gild, nor even to them without licence from one of the Masters and Wardens. The Clerks are to take notice of what every brother buys, to the end that none of those goods be sold to any but a brother of this house, nor be retailed in those places but by way of distribution among the brethren. Four or six brethren are to watch the landing of wares coming to this river, to the end that they may be brought to the places appointed.

May 27, 1603.—It being found that the law passed in 1597, for repealing the law forbidding any brother from trading directly with strangers, was to the detriment of the Gild, by which innovation certain brethren were enabled to buy up commodities which they refused afterwards to dispose of but at excessive prices, it was agreed in an assembly of the Gild that the ancient law for buying and distributing commodities coming to this City shall be established. Henceforth the Masters, Wardens and Buyers shall buy and bargain for all merchandise coming to the City to the use of the whole Brotherhood, to be distributed among them according to place or calling. No brother shall from henceforth buy or bargain with any foreigner or other person not of the Gild for any merchandise brought to this City to be sold, without special license from the Masters and Wardens, upon pain of £100. Neither shall the Masters and Wardens make any bargain for their own account, but only for the benefit of the whole Brotherhood, neither shall they refuse any bargain without the consent of a competent number of the Brotherhood.

It appears that the Trinity Gild frequently lent money to the civic au-

'A short State of the Case of the Corporation of Trinity Guild, Dublin, with an alphabetical list of the Freemen and also of the Council of the House, belonging to the Corporation who are all Freemen thereof' was printed by E. Bate, in George's Lane Dublin, in 1749. It reads thus :—

'That King Henry the VIth, in the 29th Year of his Reir incorporated the Merchants of the City of Dublin, and gave th several Privileges, gave them a Power to chuse every Year t

Masters and two Wardens, to make By-Laws for the better Gov- DUBLIN.
ernment of the Corporation, and also to repeal them as Occasion required.

That Charter was by a new Charter granted to the Corporation by Queen Elizabeth in the 19th Year of her Reign confirmed, and further Priviledges and Immunities granted to them by the Name of the Masters, Wardens, Brethren and Sisters of the Fraternity or Guild of the Holy Trinity, Dublin.

They have made and ordained many By-Laws for their Government, appointed four Quarter Assemblys of the Corporate Body to be held Yearly, viz. Michaelmas, Christmas, Easter and Midsummer, on particular Days.

The Master and Wardens are to serve for one Year only, to commence from their Michaelmas Quarter Assembly Day, at which time they are to be sworn.

There has been a Custom Annually, to appoint a Council of the House in the Nature of a Committee to prepare all the necessary Business to be laid before the Corporation at their Assembly.

This Council has for many years past been appointed by the Masters and Wardens pursuant to an Order made at every Michaelmas Quarter Assembly empowering them to name such Council.

The Masters and Wardens have usually in pursuance of such Order appointed a Council of the House Yearly, and have constantly named the Lord Mayor, all the Aldermen, the Sheriffs and Sheriffs Peers, the Masters and Wardens, and all their Peers and thirty-one more out of the Corporate Body to be of the Council of the House.

There is not any written By-Laws of the Corporation empowering this Council to act in the Election of any of the Offices of the Corporation, or in the returns to be made of Persons to serve in the Common Council of the City of Dublin pursuant to the New Rules.

Yet the Council of the House have taken upon them a right to fix on such Persons as they think proper to serve in the several Offices of the Masters and Wardens, and now insist that

DUBLIN. the Corporation is bound to elect their Masters and Wardens out — of the returns made by them.

They exercise a power of returning Persons to serve in the Common Council of the City, which is of the greatest Consequence not only to the Corporation, but to the City in general, without ever applying to the Corporation for their Consent or Approbation.

They now insist that they have a right so to do by Custom, and that the Corporate Body is bound by their Transactions therein.

The reasonableness of those Powers as insisted on by the Council of the House in Opposition to the Corporate Body, is left to [the] Consideration of every Freeman.

If they are thought reasonable, then let such Council be vested with those powers by Act of the Assembly.

If they are thought unreasonable, then the Corporate Body have a Right to reassume the power to themselves, and repeal all such Customs.

It now only remains that every Freeman consider whether the Customs and usages thus exercised by the Council of the House are consistent with the freedom of the Corporation, or whether the Corporation are desirous to be restored to their original right under the Charter for Electing such Persons as they think most proper to serve the Office of Master and Wardens out of the Corporate Body without restraint of the Council of the House. And also to the right of nominating such persons as they think most proper to serve in the Common Council of the City, or leave it to the Council of the House to nominate for them as heretofore.'

Then follow the names of 632 Freemen of the Corporation the Council of the Guild (the two Masters, two Wardens, Lord Mayor, two Sheriffs and 24 others); 14 Sheriffs Peers; 3 Master Peers; 21 Wardens Peers; and 'the 31 Members of the Corporations.'

Four or six brethren are to watch the landing of wares coming to this river, to the end that they may be brought to the places appointed.

May 27, 1603.—It being found that the law passed in 1597, for repealing the law forbidding any brother from trading directly with strangers, was to the detriment of the Gild, by which innovation certain brethren were enabled to buy up commodities which they refused afterwards to dispose of but at excessive prices, it was agreed in an assembly of the Gild that the ancient law for buying and distributing commodities coming to this City shall be established. ' A short State of the Case of the Corporation of Trinity Guild, Dublin, with an alphabetical list of the Freemen and also of the Council of the House, belonging to the Corporation who are all Freemen thereof ' was printed by E. Bate, in George's Lane, Dublin, in 1749. It reads thus :—

' That King Henry the VIth, in the 29th Year of his Reign, incorporated the Merchants of the City of Dublin, and gave them several Privileges, gave them a Power to chuse every Year tv

ernment of the Corporation, and also to repeal them as Occasion
required. —

That Charter was by a new Charter granted to the Corporation by Queen Elizabeth in the 19th Year of her Reign confirmed, and further Priviledges and Immunities granted to them by the Name of the Masters, Wardens, Brethren and Sisters of the Fraternity or Guild of the Holy Trinity, Dublin.

They have made and ordained many By-Laws for their Government, appointed four Quarter Assemblys of the Corporate Body to be held Yearly, viz. Michaelmas, Christmas, Easter and Midsummer, on particular Days.

The Master and Wardens are to serve for one Year only, to commence from their Michaelmas Quarter Assembly Day, at which time they are to be sworn.

There has been a Custom Annually, to appoint a Council of the House in the Nature of a Committee to prepare all the necessary Business to be laid before the Corporation at their Assembly.

This Council has for many years past been appointed by the Masters and Wardens pursuant to an Order made at every Michaelmas Quarter Assembly empowering them to name such Council.

The Masters and Wardens have usually in pursuance of such Order appointed a Council of the House Yearly, and have constantly named the Lord Mayor, all the Aldermen, the Sheriffs and Sheriffs Peers, the Masters and Wardens, and all their Peers and thirty-one more out of the Corporate Body to be of the Council of the House.

There is not any written By-Laws of the Corporation empowering this Council to act in the Election of any of the Offices of the Corporation, or in the returns to be made of Persons to serve in the Common Council of the City of Dublin pursuant to the New Rules.

Yet the Council of the House have taken upon them a right to fix on such Persons as they think proper to serve in the several Offices of the Masters and Wardens, and now insist that

1. The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the car was how different the city was. The air was thick with the smell of old brick and the sound of distant sirens. I had heard that the city was a mix of old and new, but I didn't realize how much it had changed. The old buildings were still there, but they were surrounded by new skyscrapers that reached up into the sky. Entrances to the Gild.

'John, the son of Ade [i.e. Adam] of Huntenford, entered for his bika [ale measure] by favour of the mayor: Surety, William Huntenford.

Galfrid Boys entered for his bika by the burgesses: Surety, Roger Tankard.

Henry Nayl, entered for 40*d.* 12*d.* to be paid forthwith, and at Candlemas 12*d.*, and at Easter 1*s.* 4*d.*: Surety, Reginald of Tavistock.

William Lurneherde entered for 3*s.*, whereof he paid forthwith 18*d.*, and the residue is to be paid at Candlemas: Sureties, William Hardy and Richard Gibba.

Robert de Polhorman entered for a bika by the burgesses.

Henry le Pensran entered for a bika by the burgesses.

Stephen Curtenay entered for his bika by the burgesses.

Philip le Dodder entered for 4*s.*, which he paid immediately on entry.

Nicholas the son of William de Bere, entered for 2*s.*, to be paid at Easter, by the burgesses.

William Stacy entered by favour of the mayor:

Robert of Tredidan entered for 2*s.* 6*d.*, to be paid at Pentecost and at Michaelmas: Surety, Adam Kech.

¹ The staplers are frequently mentioned in the Egerton MS. (ff. 18, 21 b, 34, 37 b, 90, and see above, pp. 71, 74, 76). The staple was evidently regulated by the Gild, though distinct from the latter. In 1617 the Gild is called 'the brotherhood of this guild and staple,'—Egerton MS. 1765, fol. 37 b. The staple may be regarded as a section of the Gild Merchant, consisting of the wealthier brethren.

Before any person be admitted to the Brotherhood, he shall serve seven years as an apprentice, then three years as a journeyman, then occupy two years for himself before he be made stapler.

fol. 20. The Masters and Wardens 'to sit in the bretherne house in the Tolsell' every Thursday to hear and determine the complaints of brethren.

fol. 20 b. Brethren receiving goods bought by the Gild are to pay for them the same within ten days.

fol. 22 b. No brother from henceforth to buy or receive by holding any iron, salt, wine, coals or other merchandise for the use of any other man, except he be a brother of the Gild; but first he is to bring it to his house or cellar and thence deliver it by cellar weight or measure.

fol. 23 b. No one of any other corporation of this City shall be admitted a brother of this Gild until he be sworn to give over the liberties of such other corporation. Merchants of the Gild must be resident; otherwise they are to receive no holdings.

Oct. 22, 1577.—The brethren of the Gild are not to retail wines at more than certain specified prices.

fol. 24. Oct. 21, 1583.—No brother shall have more than one shop or more than one wine-cellar to retail wine and other merchant du wares.

July 18, 1586.—It is agreed by assembly that every stranger for bringing merchandise to this City to be sold shall bring the same to the Common Hall or Common Cellar; and, further, the merchant stranger shall be taken by the Wardens or Clerks before the Masters and Wardens of the Gild, to depose whether he brought any more goods than the quantity placed in the Common Cellar. The Clerks to keep a book having an account of every man's goods; nor shall they permit any goods to be sold to any persons but brethren of the Gild, nor even to them without licence from one of the Masters and Wardens. The Clerks are to take notice of what every brother buys, to the end that none of those goods be sold to any but a brother of this house, nor be retailed in those places but by way of distribution among the brethren. Four or six brethren are to watch the landing of wares coming to this river, to the end that they may be brought to the places appointed.

May 27, 1603.—It being found that the law passed in 1597, for repealing the law forbidding any brother from trading directly with strangers, was to the detriment of the Gild, by which innovation certain brethren were enabled to buy up commodities which they refused afterwards to dispose of but at excessive prices, it was agreed in an assembly of the Gild that the ancient law for buying and distributing commodities coming to this City shall be established. Henceforth the Masters, Wardens and Buyers shall buy and bargain for all merchandise coming to the City to the use of the whole Brotherhood, to be distributed among them according to place or calling. No brother shall from henceforth buy or bargain with any foreigner or other person not of the Gild for any merchandise brought to this City to be sold, without special license from the Masters and Wardens, upon pain of £100. Neither shall the Masters and Wardens make any bargain for their own account, but only for the benefit of the whole Brotherhood, neither shall they refuse any bargain without the consent of a competent number of the Brotherhood.

trade of shopkeepers, 'who regularly pay their quarterage to this DUBLIN Guild¹.'

In June, 1702, the Lord Mayor of Dublin issued a 'Declaration,' of which the following is an abstract²:—

Complaints having been made by the several corporations of the City that persons not free of the City or of any guild or fraternity of the same exercise their trades and sell by retail 'to the great prejudice of Her Majesties subjects, for that such sort of intruders are generally unskill'd in the trades and mysteries they profess, and have been often detected of apparent fraud and deceitful practices in their way of dealing,' the Lord Mayor publishes the by-laws prohibiting such practices. In the year 1612, 'These Laws, Orders, and Constitutions following were Made and Established in full Assembly then holden.

'Whereas by the antient charters, customs, franchises, and liberties of the City of Dublin, confirmed by sundry acts of parliament, no person not being free of the City of Dublin, may or ought to sell or put to sale any wares or merchandizes within the said City or liberties thereof, or retail or keep any open shop or inward place and room for shew, sale, or putting to sale of any wares or merchandizes whatsoever.

'Now forasmuch as divers and sundry persons not being free of the said City, nothing regarding the said antient charters, franchises, customs, and liberties of the said City, but wholly intending their private profit, have of late years devised and practiced, by all sinister and subtil means, how to defraud the said charters, liberties, customs, and franchises; and to that end, do in privy and secret places, usually and ordinarily shew, sell, and put to sale their wares and merchandizes, within the said City and liberties of the same, to the great detriment and

The Clerks are to take notice of what every brother buys, to the end that none of those goods be sold to any but a brother of this house, nor be retailed in those places but by way of distribution among the brethren. Four or six brethren are to watch the landing of wares coming to this river, to the end that they may be brought to the places appointed.

May 27, 1603.—It being found that the law passed in 1597, fol. repealing the law forbidding any brother from trading directly with strangers, was to the detriment of the Gild, by which innovation certain brethren were enabled to buy up commodities which they refused afterwards to dispose of but at excessive prices, it was agreed in an assembly of the Gild that the ancient law for buying and distributing commodities coming to this City shall be established. Henceforth the Masters, Wardens and Buyers shall buy and bargain for all merchandise coming to the City to the use of the whole Brotherhood, to be distributed among them according to place or calling. No brother shall from henceforth buy or bargain with any foreigner or other person not of the Gild for any merchandise brought to this City to be sold, without special license fol. from the Masters and Wardens, upon pain of £100. Neither shall the Masters and Wardens make any bargain for their own account, but only for the benefit of the whole Brotherhood, neither shall they refuse any bargain without the consent of a competent number of the Brotherhood.

Complaints having been made by the several corporations of the City that persons not free of the City or of any guild or fraternity of the same exercise their trades and sell by retail 'to the great prejudice of Her Majesties subjects, for that such sort of intruders are generally unskill'd in the trades and mysteries they profess, and have been often detected of apparent fraud and deceitful practices in their way of dealing,' the Lord Mayor publishes the by-laws prohibiting such practices. In the year 1612, 'These Laws, Orders, and Constitutions following were Made and Established in full Assembly then holden.

'Whereas by the antient charters, customs, franchises, and liberties of the City of Dublin, confirmed by sundry acts of parliament, no person not being free of the City of Dublin, may or ought to sell or put to sale any wares or merchandizes within the said City or liberties thereof, or retail or keep any open shop or inward place and room for shew, sale, or putting to sale of any wares or merchandizes whatsoever.

'Now forasmuch as divers and sundry persons not being free of the said City, nothing regarding the said antient charters, franchises, customs, and liberties of the said City, but wholly intending their private profit, have of late years devised and practiced, by all sinister and subtil means, how to defraud the said charters, liberties, customs, and franchises; and to that end, do in privy and secret places, usually and ordinarily shew, sell, and put to sale their wares and merchandizes, within the said City and liberties of the same, to the great detriment and scot, and lot, bear offices, and undergo other charges, which strangers and others not free of the said City are not chargeable

For reformation of these disorders it is ordained by the Common Council that no person not free of the City of Dublin shall, 'by any colour, way, or means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, by himself or any other,' sell any wares by retail or keep a shop to sell by retail within the city or its liberties, upon pain of forfeiting five pounds.

'And further, that one equal moyety of the said forfeiture being recovered, shall be employed in such works of charity, as the Mayor of the City for the time being, and the Masters of the Trinity Guild for the time being shall think fit ; and the other moyety thereof to be employed for maintaining and bearing the common charges of the masters, wardens, brothers, and sisters of the Trinity Guild, within the said City, &c. Provided always that this Act or Ordinance, or anything therein contained, shall not extend to any person or persons for bringing or causing to be brought any victuals to be sold within the said City and the liberties thereof, but that they, and each of them, may sell victuals within the said City and the liberties thereof, as they might have done at any time before the making of this Act, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

'And whereas in the said year of our Lord 1612, the like by-law was made, prohibiting all persons not free of this City, from exercising any trade, mystery or occupation, in the said City or liberties thereof, under the pain of forfeiting five pounds for every such offense.

 lating and ordering of trade and prevention of fraud and deceit ;

 and approbation of the board of Aldermen, do hereby strictl

'A short State of the Case of the Corporation of Trinity Guild, Dublin, with an alphabetical list of the Freemen and also of the Council of the House, belonging to the Corporation who are all Freemen thereof' was printed by E. Bate, in George's Lane, Dublin, in 1749. It reads thus :—

'That King Henry the VIth, in the 29th Year of his Reign, incorporated the Merchants of the City of Dublin, and gave them several Privileges, gave them a Power to chuse every Year tv

ernment of the Corporation, and also to repeal them as Occasion
required.

That Charter was by a new Charter granted to the Corporation by Queen Elizabeth in the 19th Year of her Reign confirmed, and further Priviledges and Immunities granted to them by the Name of the Masters, Wardens, Brethren and Sisters of the Fraternity or Guild of the Holy Trinity, Dublin.

They have made and ordained many By-Laws for their Government, appointed four Quarter Assemblys of the Corporate Body to be held Yearly, viz. Michaelmas, Christmas, Easter and Midsummer, on particular Days.

The Master and Wardens are to serve for one Year only, to commence from their Michaelmas Quarter Assembly Day, at which time they are to be sworn.

There has been a Custom Annually, to appoint a Council of the House in the Nature of a Committee to prepare all the necessary Business to be laid before the Corporation at their Assembly.

This Council has for many years past been appointed by the Masters and Wardens pursuant to an Order made at every Michaelmas Quarter Assembly empowering them to name such Council.

The Masters and Wardens have usually in pursuance of such Order appointed a Council of the House Yearly, and have constantly named the Lord Mayor, all the Aldermen, the Sheriffs and Sheriffs Peers, the Masters and Wardens, and all their Peers and thirty-one more out of the Corporate Body to be of the Council of the House.

There is not any written By-Laws of the Corporation empowering this Council to act in the Election of any of the Offices of the Corporation, or in the returns to be made of Persons to serve in the Common Council of the City of Dublin pursuant to the New Rules.

Yet the Council of the House have taken upon them a right to fix on such Persons as they think proper to serve in the several Offices of the Masters and Wardens, and now insist that

The only reference to the 'Gilda Mercatoria' at Exeter that I could find in the Record Room of that city or in printed books, is contained in a petition of the citizens to Henry VIII for a new charter, one clause of which was to read thus:—'Et ulterius concessimus pro nobis et heredibus nostris prefatis Maiori, Balliuis et Communitati et successoribus suis, quod ipsi et eorum successores habeant et teneant imperpetuum Gildam Mercatoriam cum hansa in Ciuitate predicta, cum omnibus et singulis ad gildam mercatoriam pertinentibus, prout maior, vicecomites et Ciues Ciuitatis nostre london' melius habeant siue habere seu tenere possint. The staple was evidently regulated by the Gild, though distinct from the latter. In 1617 the Gild is called 'the brotherhood of this guild and staple,'—Egerton MS. 1765, fol. 37 b. The staple may be regarded as a section of the Gild Merchant, consisting of the wealthier brethren.

FAVERSHAM.

'On 22nd May, 1616, the Corporation, by bye-laws, established a trading guild, under the name of the Mercers' Company. The first bye-law recites that long experience had shewn that the dividing of the government of cities and towns, and of the tradesmen there, into several companies, had worked great good, and was the means of avoiding many inconveniences and preposterous disorders, in respect that the government of every artificer and tradesman being committed to men of gravity, best experienced in the same faculty and mystery, the particular grievances and deceits in every trade might be examined, reformed, and ordered. It then states the order made, at request of the tradesmen, that all persons then or afterwards exercising the trades mentioned, and inhabiting within the town, should be one company by the name of the Mercers. The list of fifty-two trades enumerated, comprehends nearly all those now exercised, and includes some which are carried on under another name, or have ceased to be exercised in the town. The latter are mercers, haberdashers of hats and small wares, cloth makers, cloth workers, weavers, shermen, barber surgeons, tanners, vintners, pewterers, armourers, and fletchers. The Company was to have a master, warden, and assistants, clerk, and beadle. No person could thenceforth exercise a trade, unless apprenticed within the town, or first admitted of the Company. No bachelor could set up his trade before the age of twenty-four under a penalty of 5s. a day. No one might sell or utter any other ware or stuff but such as belonged to his trade. Fines for admittance of strangers were not to exceed £10; and no stranger might

' A short State of the Case of the Corporation of Trinity Guild, Dublin, with an alphabetical list of the Freemen and also of the Council of the House, belonging to the Corporation who are all Freemen thereof ' was printed by E. Bate, in George's Lane, Dublin, in 1749. It reads thus :—

' That King Henry the VIth, in the 29th Year of his Reign, incorporated the Merchants of the City of Dublin, and gave ther several Privileges, gave them a Power to chuse every Year t

ernment of the Corporation, and also to repeal them as Occasion
required.

That Charter was by a new Charter granted to the Corporation by Queen Elizabeth in the 19th Year of her Reign confirmed, and further Priviledges and Immunities granted to them by the Name of the Masters, Wardens, Brethren and Sisters of the Fraternity or Guild of the Holy Trinity, Dublin.

They have made and ordained many By-Laws for their Government, appointed four Quarter Assemblys of the Corporate Body to be held Yearly, viz. Michaelmas, Christmas, Easter and Midsummer, on particular Days.

The Master and Wardens are to serve for one Year only, to commence from their Michaelmas Quarter Assembly Day, at which time they are to be sworn.

There has been a Custom Annually, to appoint a Council of the House in the Nature of a Committee to prepare all the necessary Business to be laid before the Corporation at their Assembly.

This Council has for many years past been appointed by the Masters and Wardens pursuant to an Order made at every Michaelmas Quarter Assembly empowering them to name such Council.

The Masters and Wardens have usually in pursuance of such Order appointed a Council of the House Yearly, and have constantly named the Lord Mayor, all the Aldermen, the Sheriffs and Sheriffs Peers, the Masters and Wardens, and all their Peers and thirty-one more out of the Corporate Body to be of the Council of the House.

There is not any written By-Laws of the Corporation empowering this Council to act in the Election of any of the Offices of the Corporation, or in the returns to be made of Persons to serve in the Common Council of the City of Dublin pursuant to the New Rules.

Yet the Council of the House have taken upon them a right to fix on such Persons as they think proper to serve in the several Offices of the Masters and Wardens, and now insist that

DUBLIN. the Corporation is bound to elect their Masters and Wardens out — of the returns made by them.

They exercise a power of returning Persons to serve in the Common Council of the City, which is of the greatest Consequence not only to the Corporation, but to the City in general, without ever applying to the Corporation for their Consent or Approbation.

They now insist that they have a right so to do by Custom, and that the Corporate Body is bound by their Transactions therein.

The reasonableness of those Powers as insisted on by the Council of the House in Opposition to the Corporate Body, is left to [the] Consideration of every Freeman.

If they are thought reasonable, then let such Council be vested with those powers by Act of the Assembly.

If they are thought unreasonable, then the Corporate Body have a Right to reassume the power to themselves, and repeal all such Customs.

It now only remains that every Freeman consider whether the Customs and usages thus exercised by the Council of the House are consistent with the freedom of the Corporation, or whether the Corporation are desirous to be restored to their original right under the Charter for Electing such Persons as they think most proper to serve the Office of Master and Wardens out of the Corporate Body without restraint of the Council of the House. And also to the right of nominating such persons as they think most proper to serve in the Common Council of the City, or leave it to the Council of the House to nominate for them as heretofore.'

Then follow the names of 632 Freemen of the Corporation; the Council of the Guild (the two Masters, two Wardens, Lord Mayor, two Sheriffs and 24 others); 14 Sheriffs Peers; 3 Masters Peers; 21 Wardens Peers; and 'the 31 Members of the Corporations.'

there were about 900 brethren.—(Munic. Corp. Com., 1836, Dublin,

FAVERSHAM.

'On 22nd May, 1616, the Corporation, by bye-laws, established a trading guild, under the name of the Mercers' Company. The first bye-law recites that long experience had shewn that the dividing of the government of cities and towns, and of the tradesmen there, into several companies, had worked great good, and was the means of avoiding many inconveniences and preposterous disorders, in respect that the government of every artificer and tradesman being committed to men of gravity, best experienced in the same faculty and mystery, the particular grievances and deceits in every trade might be examined, reformed, and ordered. It then states the order made, at request of the tradesmen, that all persons then or afterwards exercising the trades mentioned, and inhabiting within the town, should be one company by the name of the Mercers. The list of fifty-two trades enumerated, comprehends nearly all those now exercised, and includes some which are carried on under another name, or have ceased to be exercised in the town. The latter are mercers, haberdashers of hats and small wares, cloth makers, cloth workers, weavers, shermen, barber surgeons, tanners, vintners, pewterers, armourers, and fletchers. The Company was to have a master, warden, and assistants, clerk, and beadle. No person could thenceforth exercise a trade, unless apprenticed within the town, or first admitted of the Company. No bachelor could set up his trade before the age of twenty-four under a penalty of 5s. a day. No one might sell or utter any other ware or stuff but such as belonged to his trade. Fines for admittance of strangers were not to exceed £10; and no stranger might

FAVERSHAM. set up before his admittance upon pain of 3s. 4d. a day. — Apprentices brought up in the town were admitted of the Company, and their fine was not to exceed 2s. Persons not coming at the master's summons were to forfeit 1s. No apprentice could be taken under seven years, and his indentures were to be enrolled. Journeymen were not employed under twenty years of age. None might entice another's servant to depart upon pain of 20s. Thursday in Whitsun was appointed for a solemn assembly—sermon and dinner. Freemen dying were accompanied to their burial. Ordinances were to be made from time to time for the good government of the Company. Fines might be imposed upon such as should impugn or break the orders. [One half of the fines was to be paid to the Mayor and Commonalty, the other half to the Company.] A small quarterage was paid by the freemen of the Company, and they, upon the recommendation of the master, warden, and assistants, were made free of the town for a fine of 6s. 8d. Lastly, the master, wardens, and assistants, were not to interfere with the government of the town, but only with measures appertaining to the trades and mysteries of the Company. These ordinances the Justices of Assize for the County of Kent confirmed.'—(Kent Archaeol. Soc., Trans., vol. ix. p. lxviii.)

'A second set of bye-laws, also confirmed by the judges of assize, was made by the mayor, jurats and commonalty in 1699. The principal provisions in these, relating to the company, are the following: that the mayor for the time being is to be master, that the wardens are to be chosen from the jurats, four of the assistants from the common councilmen, and the other four from the freemen of the company; that all sums, paid on admission into the company by foreigners are to the use of the mayor, jurats and commonalty, to be employed toward the public charges of the town, and some other fines mentioned to the use of the company. In case of neglect or refusal to pay sums imposed by the company, the beadle is to make distress of the goods of the party. The bye-law, after reciting that the number of the freemen of the town had become so small, as not to furnish sufficient for jurats and commoners, gives the mayor and FAVERSHAM.

four jurats power to require any of the freemen of the company to be made free of the town, under a penalty of 5*l.* and of disfranchisement.' In 1835 the old organization of the Mercers' Company was still maintained; its sole remaining function was
'to impose a restriction upon the right to trade within the jurisdiction of the corporation.' The Mayor for the time being was still Master of the Company.—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, pp. 968–

our treasury, that they and their heirs may have from henceforth a free mercatory gild, and that they be free of toll and stallage in buying and selling all their saleable things in the borough aforesaid; so notwithstanding that neither the said burgesses nor their heirs do receive any stranger into their gild aforesaid as a burgess in the gild aforesaid, unless it be with the assent of us or our steward for the time being, and in our court be presented and entered.'—(Stark, Gainsburgh, 75–76.)

EXETER.

The only reference to the 'Gilda Mercatoria' at Exeter that I could find in the Record Room of that city or in printed books, is contained in a petition of the citizens to Henry VIII for a new charter, one clause of which was to read thus:—'Et ulterius concessimus pro nobis et heredibus nostris prefatis Maiori, Balliuis et Communitati et successoribus suis, quod ipsi et eorum successores habeant et teneant imperpetuum Gildam Mercatoriam cum hansa in Ciuitate predicta, cum omnibus et singulis ad gildam mercatoriam pertinentibus, prout maior, vicecomites et Ciues Ciuitatis nostre london' melius habeant siue habere seu tenere possint. There was a powerful Gild of Merchant Adventurers at Exeter, which received a charter from Elizabeth. We are informed that EXETER. it actually overshadowed the local government and dictated laws to the community, to which the Mayor and Chamber submitted. —(W. Cotton, An Elizabethan Gild of Exeter, p. 24.)

FAVERSHAM.

'On 22nd May, 1616, the Corporation, by bye-laws, established a trading guild, under the name of the Mercers' Company. The first bye-law recites that long experience had shewn that the dividing of the government of cities and towns, and of the tradesmen there, into several companies, had worked great good, and was the means of avoiding many inconveniences and preposterous disorders, in respect that the government of every artificer and tradesman being committed to men of gravity, best experienced in the same faculty and mystery, the particular grievances and deceits in every trade might be examined, reformed, and ordered. It then states the order made, at request of the tradesmen, that all persons then or afterwards exercising the trades mentioned, and inhabiting within the town, should be one company by the name of the Mercers. The list of fifty-two trades enumerated, comprehends nearly all those now exercised, and includes some which are carried on under another name, or have ceased to be exercised in the town. The latter are mercers, haberdashers of hats and small wares, cloth makers, cloth workers, weavers, shermen, barber surgeons, tanners, vintners, pewterers, armourers, and fletchers. The Company was to have a master, warden, and assistants, clerk, and beadle. No person could thenceforth exercise a trade, unless apprenticed within the town, or first admitted of the Company. No bachelor could set up his trade before the age of twenty-four under a penalty of 5s. a day. No one might sell or utter any other ware or stuff but such as belonged to his trade. Fines for admittance of strangers were not to exceed £10; and no stranger might

four jurats power to require any of the freemen of the company to be made free of the town, under a penalty of 5*l.* and of dis-
franchisement.' In 1835 the old organization of the Mercers' Company was still maintained; its sole remaining function was
'to impose a restriction upon the right to trade within the jurindiction of the corporation.' The Mayor for the time being was still Master of the Company.—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, pp. 968-

GAINSBOROUGH.

Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, confirmed the liberties of the town (temp. Edward III). The following is the clause of the charter relating to the Gild [translation]:—'We have also granted to the same burgesses, whose names remain with us in our treasury, that they and their heirs may have from henceforth
a free mercatory gild, and that they be free of toll and stallage in buying and selling all their saleable things in the borough aforesaid; so notwithstanding that neither the said burgesses nor their heirs do receive any stranger into their gild aforesaid as a burghess in the gild aforesaid, unless it be with the assent of us or our

In ff. 118–138 we have the proceedings of the Gild from 30 Edw. III to 50 Edw. III; in ff. 146–156, the same from 14 Hen. IV to 9 Hen. V. The scribe, Geo. Austen (a person of that name was Town Clerk of Guildford 9 Eliz.,—Addit. MS. 6167, fol. 203*b*), begins as follows:—‘I finde a verie auncient booke of this towne called “The Black Booke” written in the tymes of Edward III, Richard II, Henry IV, Henry V, Henry VI, Edward IV, Henry VII, sometymes Kings of Englande, wherein are written and recorded, the choice of divers officers within the said towne yerelie, with divers accoumpts of money receved for rents, forfeitures, proffitts of courts, faires, customes, and other things, by the bayliff, halwardens and other officers of the said towne yerelie collected and paide. And also divers entries of ffynes paid, and auncient customes observed by sundry persons for admittance by a generall consent into the libertie and ffreedome of the said towne, which booke is so ragged, torne, and rent one peece from another, yea, almost every leaf one from the other, and so disorderly placed that I could hardly bring them into order agayne. Now for so much of the same as came to my hands (a great many leaves of that book being lacking) I have reduced as nere as I can into their places, and collected out of the same the cheif substaunce of so much of that which I found there written as coulde well be readd, for in manie of the leaves of that booke the very words and letters thereof in divers places are worn out by age and ill keepinge, as may appere to them that shall look into the same. . . . I have briefly collected out of the same the chief matters therein sett downe, which I have summarilie caused to be written in this my booke. . . . For the rest of the matters contained in that booke from the first yere of the raign of king Henry the sixth forthwardes, I have omitted to make eny collections of those latter tymes, because I find from that tyme the booke called the red booke of the said towne to begin and continue yerelie the election of officers, admitting of foreyners by fine and some other things. . . . I have taken this paynes to gather out of that book brieflie that which followeth, that thereby instede of the substance some shadow or resemblance of that old book may remayne for those which shall succeed. And yett I would not have that black book by this means to be cast away or not regarded, appering old and ragged, but rather to accompte of him the more in that he doth proceed from your auncient predecessors, and afford him that favour to let him have abode amongst you, where he may rest safelie.’ . . .

The British Museum MS., being more accessible, has been followed in the text, though the MS. at Guildford is fuller. Additions and variations adopted from the latter are given in brackets, but words added in italics are emendations by myself. The folios of the Brit. Mus. MS. and the Guildford MS. are indicated in the margin by ‘fol.’ and ‘F.’ respectively.

Computus Custodum Aule. Finis pro Gilda habenda, Tauro, etc.

There is a break in the records from 50 Edward III to 14 Henry IV. From 14 Henry IV to 9 Henry V the entries begin as above, 'Gilda mercatoria tenta,' etc. The 'Senescallus' is superseded by a 'Maior.' The other officers are a Bailiff, Clerk, two Hall-wardens and two Bridge-wardens. Admissions to the Gild are recorded under the years 1, 2 and 6 Henry V; the account of the Bridge-wardens, under 14 Henry IV and 4 Henry V, and that of the Bailiff, 2 Henry V. The latter speaks of 'Summa Aule et gardini simul cum Collectione custume, xxviii. s. iiii. d.'

From 1 Henry VI¹ to 10 Henry VII the entries in the British Museum transcript consist merely of the names of the mayor and bailiff. The old title 'Senescallus' appears once more 8 Henry VI. During the reign of Henry VIII, the entries are occasionally fuller and are generally headed,—'Curia legalis tenta die Lune proxima post festum Sancti Hillarii,' or 'At the Lawday holden on Monday,' etc. Admissions to the Gild occur under the years 11, 13, 15 and 20 Henry VII, 13 Henry VIII, 3 and 18 Elizabeth.

Of these later entries the following comprise all that are of interest for the study of the Gild:—

17. 5. 'Williclmus Tingwike ex assensu totius communitatis Gilde

ing to the Hall, were presented before Thomas Tanner, Mayor.'

A manuscript volume in the town archives at Guildford, consisting of 169 pages and extending from 28 Eliz. to 27 Charles II¹, contains the proceedings of the 'Gilda Mercatoria' and the 'Curia legalis.' The former was the court ('ad hanc curiam') held on the Monday next after Michaelmas, when such officers as the mayor, bailiff, clerk, coroner, sergeants-at-mace, and later the civic justice of the peace were elected. The 'curia legalis' (Law-day) was held yearly the Monday next after the feast of

GUILDFORD. St. Hilary, when the constables, 'decennarii, gustatores carnis et piscium, scrutatores et sigillatores corii, gustatores panis et cervisie,' etc. were elected. Otherwise it is difficult to detect any difference between the two courts, the same kind of business being apparently transacted at both. Occasionally there are admissions to the Gild, or to the freedom both at Hilary and Michaelmas¹, the two expressions 'admissus ad gildam' (or 'admitted to the fraternity') and 'was made freemen' being used synonymously, the latter gradually superseding the former. These freemen become more numerous in the reign of Charles II, and are generally knights, lords and other men of distinction.

There is another small folio volume at Guildford, bound in vellum, with the title 'Court Book, 1725-1750.' The entries are quite similar to those just described, but 'curia legalis' and 'gilda mercatoria' are not so carefully distinguished, most of the entries both at Hilary and Michaelmas beginning simply, 'at a court of our lord the king held,' etc. But when there is an election of officers, the difference between Gild merchant and Law-day above mentioned is still perceptible. The last allusion to the Gild in this volume occurs in the year 1749.

HARTLEPOOL.

Richard Poor, Bishop of Durham, granted the burgesses of Hartlepool a Gild Merchant (A.D. 1230):—'Volumus etiam et concedimus quod dicti Burgenses habeant libertatem de majore habendo et Gildam mercatoriam, sicut alii Burgenses habent melius et honorabilius in Burgis Domini regis in Anglia.'—(Sharp, Hartl., p. 68, App. p. 1.) This was confirmed by royal charters of 19 Henry III and 39 Edward III.—(Petyt MS., i. 362.)

April 15, 1673. 'It is ordered at a general guild that whosoever he be of any merchant trade or house-carpenter, joyner, ship-carpenter, draper, taylors, plumers, glasiars, cordiners, butchers, glovers, and skinners, whitesmiths, blacksmiths, wallers, wine coopers, tallow chandlers, et alias that shall presume to come are enjoined, to the prejudice of the free trades and companyes within the corporation, as now is ordered for the good off the free burgesses and inhabitants theirow, and for the better preservation off all the companyes and encouragement of them, to them and their successors for ever hereafter, we doe hereby order and have fully agreed upon, that whatsoever he be that shall com within the corporation aforesaid, shall pay to the use off the major and burgesses of this towne for every such time soe offending as he or they shall trade, complent being made by one or two more of the companys aforesaid to the major and burgesses, for every such offense x.s.' The companies shall from time to time meet and make laws for the better encouragement of their trades. Anyone making any 'brash' to the damage of any company shall pay to the warden of such company for every such offence over and above the fine above mentioned x.s.

—(Sharp, 84.)

Oct. 1, 1716. The 'guild jury' having pointed out the ruinous condition of the church and town walls, it is ordered that the yearly treat of the mayor be discontinued, and the accustomed cess for that purpose be used to repair the said church, etc.—

of Hedon, among other liberties:—'Quod iidem Burgenses et eorum heredes et successores Communitatem inter se habeant, et Majorem et Ballivos, Coronatorem et alios ministros ydoneos

HEDON. in gilda, lotto et scotto cum Burgensibus predictis, in tallagiis, — contributionibus et aliis oneribus communibus totam communitatem ville predictæ tangentibus Et quod habeant gildam mercatoriam et hansas suas in villa predicta.' — (Petyt MS., i. 336-342; Poulson, Holderness, ii. 111.)

HELSTON.

'Whereas Richard, Earl of Picardy and Cornwall, did by his letters patent grant unto the burgesses of Helston, that they should have all such liberties and customs as were before that time granted and used, and that they then had, by the letters patent of King John¹, in the 2nd year of his reign, inter alia, Gildam mercatore (sic); and after the said Richard, by his letters patent, dated the 24th Henry III² granted to the burgesses of Liskerrett, that they should enjoy all such liberties and free customs as he had granted to the burgesses of Helston; and for that the said gild merchant court is a court of brotherhood, for the determination of all contracts and matters amongst them by speedy trial, and in avoidance of great charges, vexations and foreign trials; and that the same court shall be hereafter, by the consent of the mayor and of all the burgesses of Liskerret aforesaid, confirmed de tribus septimanis in tres (every three weeks) in the afternoon of the day of the pleading court for foreigners, to be holden before the mayor or his deputy and two of his brethren at least, by the name of the Burgess Court. The form and causes of trial are as followeth: 'trespass, debt, agreement broken, so the same do not concern the title of lands nor exceed the sum of £5.—(Allen, Liskeard, 265-266.)³

HENLEY-ON-THAMES.

The following is extracted from an inquisition taken after the death of Edmund, Earl of Cornwall:—'Manerium et villa

A.D. 1300.

² Petyt MS., i. 345-348, gives this charter in a confirmation of 10 Edward III.

³ This record is apparently of the time of Elizabeth. Allen took it from the 'constitution book' of Liskeard.

de Henlee tenuit de domino Rege in capite, sed per quod HENLEY-ON-THAMES.
servicium ignorant. . . . Item est ibi quedam customa Mercatorum que vocatur Gilde Silver, et valet per annum 13s. 4d.
Item est ibi quoddam [proficuum or tributum] mercatorum
cujus tolnetum valet per annum 15s.'—(Burn, Henley, 229–230.)

This Gild Silver was probably 'money received from non-freemen for permission to trade in the town. Some early charter perhaps contained a grant of a "Gild Merchant." Gilde Silver is elsewhere called "a certain tribute of the Merchants."—(Ibid., 230.)

A warden of the Gild of Henley is mentioned in deeds of 1359 and 1405.—(Ibid., 324; Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, p. 71.)

HEREFORD.

The Gild Merchant of Hereford was confirmed by charters of 17 John, 11 Henry III, 8 Edw. II and 17 Jac. I¹.

Among the liberties which a jury ascribed to Hereford in the year 1154, we find the subjoined:—'Also we use amongst ourselves that no man, of what state or condition soever, shall not make any merchandise, nor have our common letter or test for any matter touching himself, unless he be in scot and lot with our citizens [of the] gilda mercatoria, or freemen of the city as touching the selling of his merchandise, and unless he shall be dwelling in the same city with his wife; and first of all shall have himself with his goods and chattels, viz. uprising and down lying. And this custom ought and was wont to be published at the two principal inquisitions twice a year.'—(Archaeol. Assoc., Journal, vol. 27, p. 466.)²

The following was certified by the Bailiffs of Hereford to the Mayor and Bailiffs of Rhuddlan, 22 Edw. III:—'Cives A.D. 1348.
Herfordie possunt recipere in gildam suam Gallicos, Wallenses,

² Cf. Johnson, Anc. Customs of Heref., 18; Duncumb, Hereford, i. 323. The latter version has:—'unlesse he be in scott and lott with our cittizens in the merchant-hall for making merchandize,' etc.

HEREFORD. Scotos & quoscunque alios qui sunt de fide & ligeancia Domini Regis Anglie, ita quod moram faciant in dicta Civitate vel Suburbio ejusdem, & solvant Loth & Scoth cum dictis Civibus supradictis.'—(Wotton, Leges Wallicae, 517.)

In or about 1497 it was ordered at a law-day that every person 'admitted guild merchant' of the city should pay upon admission 20s., and 2s. to the king's officers. No foreigner or stranger was to retail any manner of merchandise within the city unless 'admitted free by the wardens of such craft.'—(Johnson, Ancient Customs, 83.)

'To the right worshipful Thomas Church, mayor of the cittie of Hereford, his brethren the aldermen and the three enquests. We your neighbors and co-citizens of the cittie of Hereford freemen and guild merchants of the same, most humbly come, complaining and showing unto your worships, that whereas there hath bene an ancient custome time out of mind within the same that no porter shall summon or presume to arrest anie freemen or guild merchant within the same cittie'. . . . Porters now violate this custom, etc., etc.¹—(Ibid., 79.)

In 1619 James I granted the citizens of Hereford 'a Gild of Merchants with a hanse and all customs thereto belonging, so that none, unless in the time of markets and fairs, who are not free of the Gild, should merchandise in the city, unless at the will of the common council.' 'That no inhabitant there should maintain any liberties or franchises within the city, suburbs and liberties, unless he were a citizen in the Gild of Merchants there, continually residing and conversant with the city, suburbs and liberties.'—(Merew. and Stephens, 1496.)

IPSWICH.

The following document, copied from the muniments of Ipswich¹, throws much light not only upon the Gild Merchant but also upon the general constitution of a mediaeval borough.

 Ipswich records bearing this name are to be distinguished. The original Domesday Roll was stolen from the corporation of Ipswich in the year 56
 Henry III. A jury of 24 townsmen then made a second Domesday Book (19 Edw. I), which has also been lost. But two official copies made in the reign of Edward II are still among the town muniments, and a third transcript of later date is in the British Museum. The New or Great Domesday of Ipswich was compiled in the year 12 Henry VIII and, like its predecessors, contains 'the old grauntes, liberties, ordynaunces, lawes, and good constitucions of the burgh.' (Rep. MSS. Com. 1883, pp. 222-223.)—The record of the transactions of the burgesses in the year 2 John is to be found in the Little Domesday of temp. Edward II (ff. 77-81) and, with certain additions, in 'Liber Primus' of the Great Domesday. These additions are indicated in the text by brackets; otherwise I have followed the wording of the Little Domesday, which, however, differs but slightly from that of the Great Domesday.

IPSWICH.

[Johannes Dei gracia Rex, etc. Sciatis nos concessisse et presenti carta nostra confirmasse burgensibus nostris de Gippeswico burgum nostrum de Gippeswico cum omnibus pertinentiis suis et libertatibus omnibus et liberis consuetudinibus suis, tenendum de nobis et heredibus nostris, illis et heredibus suis hereditarie, reddendo per annum rectam et solitam firmam ad terminum Sancti Michaelis per manum Gippeswici prepositi ad scaccarium nostrum, et c. sol. sterlingorum numero de incremento ad eundem terminum, quos reddere solebant. Concessimus eciam quod omnes burgenses de Gippeswico sint quieti de theloneo et stallagio, lastagio, passagio, pontagio et omnibus aliis consuetudinibus per totam terram nostram et per portus maris. Concessimus eis quod nullus eorum placitet extra burgum Gippeswici de ullo placito preter placita de tenuris exterioribus, exceptis ministris nostris; et quod habeant gildam mercatoriam et hansam suam; et quod nullus hospitetur nec quicquam per vim capiat infra burgum de Gippeswico; et quod terras suas et vadia sua et omnia debita sua juste habeant, quicumque eis ea debeant; et quod de terris et tenuris suis que infra burgum sunt, rectum eis teneatur secundum consuetudinem burgi Gippeswici et liberorum burgorum nostrorum; et de debitis suis que acomodata fuerint apud Gippeswicum et de vadiis ibidem factis placita apud Gippeswicum teneantur; et quod nullus eorum de misericordia pecunie judicetur nisi secundum legem liberorum burgorum nostrorum. Prohibemus eciam quod nemo in tota terra nostra theloneum, nec stallagium, nec aliquam aliam consuetudinem ab hominibus Gippeswici capiat super forisfacturam nostram x. librarum. Quare volumus et firmiter precipimus quod predicti burgenses omnes predictas libertates et liberas consuetudines habeant et teneant bene et in pace, sicut eas meliores et liberiores habuerunt vel habent ceteri burgenses liberorum burgorum nostrorum Anglie, salvis in omnibus civibus nostris London' libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus suis. Preterea volumus et concedimus quod iidem burgenses nostri per commune consilium villate sue eligant duos de legalioribus

[Capitulum Secundum.]

fol. 77. Hoc est transcriptum Rotuli facti in Gyppeswico Anno Regni Regis Johannis secundo super Statu et ordinacione eiusdem ville, prout continetur in dicto Rotulo, qui est in communi Cista ville memorate, Et qui sic incipit.

In Rotulo de modo et forma pro Balliuis et Coronatoribus in Gippeswico eligendis secundum formam Carte domini Regis Jo-hannis, videlicet:—Die Jouis proxima post festum Natiuitatis Sancti

A.D. 1200. Johannis Baptiste anno Regni Regis Johannis secundo congregata est tota villata Burgi Gippeswici in Cimiterio Beate Marie ad Turrim ad eligendum duos Balliuos et quatuor Coronatores in eodem Burgo secundum formam carte predicte domini Regis, quam idem Rex Burgensibus Burgi predicti iam de novo concessit; quo die iidem Burgenses de communi assensu et vna voce elegerunt duos probos et legales homines villate sue, videlicet, Johannem filium Normanni et Willielmum de Belines, qui iurati sunt ad custodiendum preposituram predicti Burgi, Et quod bene et fideliter tractabunt tam pauperes quam diuites.

[Capitulum Tercium.]

Item elegerunt eodem die vna voce quatuor Coronatores, videlicet, Johannem filium Normanni, Will. de Belines, Philippum

Corone et ad alia facienda, que ad Coronam pertinent in eodem — Burgo, et ad superuidendum quod predicti Balliui juste et legitime fol. 77 b.
tractent tam pauperes quam diuites.

[Capitulum Quartum.]

Item eodem die ordinatum est per commune consilium dicte villate quod de cetero sint in Burgo predicto duodecim Capitales Portmenni iurati, sicut in aliis liberis Burgis Anglie sunt, et quod habeant plenam potestatem pro se et tota villata ad gubernandum et manutenendum predictum Burgum et omnes libertates eiusdem Burgi, et ad iudicia ville reddenda, Ac etiam ad omnia [custodienda], ordinanda et facienda in eodem Burgo, que fieri debeant pro statu et honore ville memorate. Et super hoc dictum est per Balliuos et Coronatores predictos quod tota villata veniat in Cymiterio predicto, die dominica proxima post festum apostolorum Petri et Pauli proximo futurum, ad eligendum predictos XII. Capitales Portmennos secundum formam eiusdem ordinacionis.

[Capitulum Quintum.]

Die Dominica proxima post festum Apostolorum Petri et Pauli Anno supradicto congregata est tota villata de Gippeswico coram Ballivis et Coronatoribus eiusdem ville ad eligendum XII. Capitales Portmannos in eadem villa, prout prius ordinatum est. Et predicti Balliui et Coronatores per assensum villate eligunt quatuor probos et legales homines de qualibet parochia dicte ville, qui iurati sunt ad eligendum XII. Capitales Portmannos de melioribus, discretioribus ac potencioribus ville predicte ad ordinandum pro statu ville, ut predictum est. Et predicti iurati de parochiis veniunt fol. 78. et eligunt pro se et tota villata hec XII. nomina subscripta, videlicet, Johannem filium Normanni, Will. de Belines, Philippum de Porta, Rogerum Lew, Petrum Euerard, Will. Goscalk, Amisium Bolle, Johannem de Sancto Georgio, Johannem le Mayster, Sayerum filium Thurstani, Robertum Parys et Andream Peper. Qui iurati sunt coram tota villata predicta quod bene et fideliter custodient et gubernabunt Burgum Gippeswici, et ad manutenendum secundum eorum posse omnes libertates, que iam de nouo IPSWICH. Burgensibus eiusdem Burgi per cartam predicti domini Regis concessa sunt, et eciam ad omnes alias libertates et liberas consuetudines ville predictae [manutenendas], et ad iudicia curiarum eiusdem ville iuste reddenda, non habentibus respectum [ad] alicuius personam, Et insuper ad omnia alia ordinanda et facienda que pro statu et honore ville predictae fieri contingent, Et ad iuste et legitime tractandum tam pauperes quam diuites.

[Capitulum vi^m.]

Eodem die quum cito predicti xii. Capitales Portmenni fuerant iurati in forma predicta, fecerunt totam villatam predictam leuare manus ultra librum et in vna voce solempniter iurare quod ab illa hora in antea erunt obedientes, intendentes, consulantes et auxiliantes Balliuis, Coronatoribus suis ac omnibus et singulis predictis xii. Capitalibus Portmannis cum corporibus et catallis eorum ad predictam villam Gyppeswici et nouam cartam predictam ac honorem et omnes libertates et liberas consuetudines eiusdem ville conseruandas et manutenendas in omnibus locis versus quoscumque, excepto tamen versus dominum Regem et Regiam potestatem, secundum eorum posse, prout iuste et rationabiliter facere debeant.

[Capitulum vii^m.]

Eodem die concordatum est quod predicta noua carta domini Regis tradatur duobus probis et legalibus hominibus eiusdem ville ad salvo custodiendum, videlicet, Johanni filio Normanni et Philippo de Porta, qui iurati sunt ad dictam cartam fideliter custodiendam et ad illam predictae villate liberare, cum necesse fuerit et ad hoc facere muniti fuerint et ex parte villate requisiti.

Et quia plura pro statu et honore ville sunt [ordinanda]¹ et facienda que congrue ad hunc diem non possunt fieri, concordatum est quod Balliui, Coronatores et omnes capitales portmenni predicti veniant et simul sint hic die Jouis proxima post festum Translacionis beati Thome Martiris proximo futurum ad ordinandum et faciendum ea que contigerint ordinari et fieri pro statu et honore ville memorate.

[Capitulum viii^m.]IPSWICH.

Die Jouis proxima post festum Translacionis sancti Thome Martiris Anno supradicto congregati sunt Balliui et Coronatores ac ceteri Capiales portmenni ad tractandum et ordinandum de statu ville Gyppeswyci.

In primo ordinant quod omnes custume predicti Burgi de fol. 79. cetero colligantur per manus Balliuorum et quatuor proborum et legalium hominum eiusdem Burgi. Et quod ipsi de anno in annum soluant [ad] Scaccarium domini Regis pro predicta villata rectam et solitam firmam.

[Capitulum ix^m.]

Item ordinant quod in dicto Burgo sint duo bedelli iurati ad faciendum attachiamenta, districciones et omnia precepta Balliuorum, Coronatorum et Capitalium portmennorum que pertinent ad faciendum in eodem burgo. Et quod vnus de eisdem Bedellis sit custos omnium prisonum qui per Balliuos Burgi attachiabuntur. Et quod ille custos inueniat securitatem ad saluo custodiendum omnes prisiones suos, etc.

[Capitulum x^m.]

Item ordinant quod per Commune consilium villate fiat in dicto Burgo vnum Commune sigillum ad seruiendum in grossis negociis tangentibus communitatem dicti Burgi, et eciam ad litteras inde consignandas de veritate testificandas pro omnibus et singulis Burgensibus eiusdem Burgi, et ad omnia alia facienda que fieri debeant ad communem honorem et vtilitatem ville predicte. Et quod illud Commune sigillum custodiatur per tres vel quatuor probos et legales homines de predicto Burgo ad hoc iuratos coram Communitate eiusdem Burgi.

[Capitulum xi^m.]

Item ordinant quod in dicto Burgo per commune consilium villate sue eligatur vnus probus et legalis et idonius homo, vt sit Aldermannus Gilde Mercatorie in eodem Burgo. Et quod qua- fol. 79 b. tuor probi et legales homines eiusdem Burgi associantur ei. Et quod Aldermannus et ipsi quatuor iurentur quod bene et fide-year (2 John), to ascertain how and in what manner certain religious persons having lands and tenements in the neighbourhood of Ipswich ought to be free and quit of toll in the same town.

The jury state that the Archbishop and Prior of Canterbury, the Bishop and Prior of Norwich, the Bishop and Prior of Ely, the Abbot of Colchester, the Abbot of Coggeshale, etc., etc. with their men and villains are quit of custom, but only on things growing on their own lands and things bought for their own use, 'sed quod debent esse quieti de suis propriis bonis crescentibus et exeuntibus de suis propriis terris, pertinentibus ad ecclesias suas et quas tenent in puram et perpetuam elemosinam.'

In the same year the Prior of the Holy Trinity in Ipswich fol. 81 (a) b. became a burgess ('deuenit Burgensis') and gave to the commonalty 20s., in aid of the expenses incurred in obtaining the new charter, and to the hanse of the Gild one quarter of wheat and a boar,—'et dat ad hansam gilde ville vnum quarterium frumenti et vnum aprem.' The Prior of St. Peter in Ipswich also became a burgess, giving to the commonalty one mark and to the Gild one coomb of wheat and two wethers,—'et dat ad gildam ville vnam cumbram frumenti et duos multones;' and he promised to be in lot and scot as an 'intrinsic' burgher,—

IPSWICH. There are many entries of 'foreign' burgesses made during the reigns of John, Henry III and Edward I. Many lords and knights were among the 'forinseci' thus admitted,—Lord Roger de Bigod, Lord Hugh de Peche of Belinges, Lord Geoffrey de Burneulle, Lord Reginald de Panely, Lord Hugh de Rous, Lord Roger de Montalt, Lord Gilbert Peche, etc. The following will illustrate the nature of these entries :—

fol. 82. 'Hec sunt nomina forinsecorum burgensium qui facti sunt in Gippeswico pro quodam certo dando annuatim ad firmam domini Regis ville predictæ.... Dominus Rogerus le Bygod, Comes Norfolcie et Marescallus Anglie, in aula prioris Sancti Petri de Gippeswico deuenit Burgensis eiusdem ville. Et dat ad gildam mercatoriam vnum bouem et vnum taurum, duo quarteria frumenti et duo quarteria brasii pro eo quod ipse et omnes natiui sui decetero sint quieti de Theloneo in villa predicta, videlicet, de omnibus bladis et aliis rebus suis crescentibus et renouantibus in suis propriis terris et dominicis tantum, et de omnibus rebus emptis pro suis propriis estouiis, et aliter non. Et eciam soluet annuatim imperpetuum ad festum Sancti Michaelis iiii. d. pro cayo suo in Gippeswico ad firmam ville predictæ, set tamen si natiui sui fuerint mercatores, soluant ad firmam domini Regis rectam et debitam custumam suam, et maxime de mercandisis suis. Et quia idem Comes erat auxilians ad cartam domini Regis de libertatibus ville impetrandam, concessit et in fide promisit ad manutenendum honorem ville Gippeswici et libertates in dicta noua carta contentas. Et predictus Comes habet transcriptum huius irrotulamenti penes se sub communi sigillo ville.

Eodem die dominus Robertus de Vaus, miles predicti comitis, factus fuit burgensis et dat ad hansam gilde vnum quarterium frumenti. Et vt ipse et omnes natiui sui, quos habet in Wenham et alibi, sint quieti in Gippeswyco de omni theloneo, modo et forma supradictis, concessit dare singulis annis in festo Sancti Michaelis ad firmam predictæ ville iiii. s. et ii. busselos frumenti¹.

IPSWICH. defaulting in his duties to the Gild should be summoned by the Wardens of the next Court to show cause why he should not forfeit his freedom. If he came not to the Court, he was reputed as 'foreign,' that is, no Burgess or member of the Gild.

16 Eliz.—Ordered by the Great Court of Ipswich 'that in respect of the grete skarsitie and derthe of all victualle in this realm at this present, the feast of the Guyld Merchant usually kepte in this towne shall be kepte by the Aldermen of the Guilde in such order and forme as it hathe ben used to be kepte. And that the said Aldermen shall have allowed to them out of the town treasury such some of moneye as shalbe agreed upon at the next Court after the saide feaste made.'

18 Eliz.—The occupations, or trades of Ipswich were newly drawn up into four Companies: I. The Mercers, including all 'maryners, shipwryghts, bokebynders, prynters, fyshmongers, swordsetters, coks [i.e. cooks], fletcheres, arrowhed-makers, phisicians, hatters, cappers, mercers, merchaunts' and several others; II. The Drapers, including all 'joyners, taylors, carpenters, innholders, ffreemasons, bryckelayers, tylers, carryers, casket-makers, surgeons, clothyers' and five others; III. The Taylors, including 'cutlers, smythes, barbers, chandlers, pewterers, mynstrells, pedlers, plumbers, pynners, millers, millwrights, cowpers, shermen, glaziers, turners, tynkers, taylors' and two others; IV. The Shoemakers, including the 'curryers, coler-makers, sadlers, poynters, coblers, skynners, tanners, butchers, carters and laborours.' It was ordered that each company should have an Alderman and two Wardens. All foreigners coming to the town should upon becoming members of the Gilds be distributed among the aforesaid Companies at the discretion of the Bailiffs.

3 James I.—The Great Court agreed that 'Roger Wallis hathe openlie confessed that he hathe offended the towne, in contemninge the auntient orders and usages of this towne, by not holdinge and keepinge of the Guild Merchant of this towne, being elected thereunto; and thereuppon hathe nowe made requeste to this courte to be a free Burgess of this towne and to be dischargd from keeping of the Guild Merchant, for a reasonable fyne.' Wallis was made free and discharged from entering IPSWICH. upon the duties of Alderman of the Gild for a fine of vii. li. —

3 James I.—R. Seelie was elected Alderman of the Gild to serve with another and to keep two dinners in each year, at which every Burgess should pay 16*d*. for himself and his wife, and the first or next Gild was ordered to be held on Sunday se'nnight after Midsummer.

4 James I.—A tierce of claret was ordered to be provided for the use of the Gild at the cost of the town.

5 James I.—The Aldermen of the Gild were ordered to keep two dinners, and all freemen paying subsidy in the town should attend with their wives, and 'none other.'

6 James I.—The Portmen were ordered to pay 5*s*. each to the dinner of the Gild, the 'Twenty-four' 3*s*. 4*d*. each, and every Freeman 2*s*. 6*d*. None should be allowed to attend but such as were Burgesses; whether they attended or not, they were bound to pay toward the feast.

After the reign of James I the Gild declined in importance, and 'eventually the feast and the Gild are found dwindling to a dinner bestowed upon the Twelve and Four-and-Twenty.'

Nathaniel Bacon, town clerk of Ipswich 1651–1660, writes as follows :—' Albeit that the government of the Guild still continued [after the period of the Norman Conquest] in order to the proffit of them selves in matter of trade; and soe did for a long time after, till those kind of ffraternities grew distastfull to kings in their government, by trenching too much, as was thought, uppon the prerogative of kings, by their ordinances, and by lawes, the same were committed to the cognisance of the Justices of the peace, or chief Governour of the Corporation, to be disallowed, or allowed and recorded by them, and afterwards to the Justices of the Benches and of assizes. And thus their power being checked, they withered, and for their better support, taking into their society many fforrainers that minded not that way of Trade, by degrees the ffreedom of the Guild was changed into the freedom of the Towne, the Guildholder still retaining his title and name as a monument of an auncient freedom, and no more, allthough

IPSWICH. formerly he was looked uppon as a kind of check to the Bayliffs, and in somme acts, (even of the kings of this land,) sett in order before the Bayliffs. As it hath bein, therefore, the wisdome of this town hitherto, soe it will be theire wisdome for ye future, to continue constant regard of election of Guildholders, allthough it be merely tituler, and of no consequence in the government of this Town.'—(Bacon, Annalls, p. vi.)

Kenfig Ordinances, 4 Edw. III.

'The ancient, true and laudable Ordinances of the said town A.D. 1330. newly drawn by the consent of the portreeve and aldermen thereof whose names are hereunder written, word by word and agreeable to the old decayed roule, with other more ordinances added thereunto, for the good government of the said town and libertys. Dated the twentyeth day of May and the fourth year of Edward the Third after the Conquest.

10. 'Item it is ordained that noe manner of burgess shall buy noe manner of merchandizes that shall happen to come to the said town, but such men as shall be appointed by the said portreeve and aldermen, upon pain of XL.s.; and all such merchandizes to be divided amongst all the burgesses, every man according to his ability.

20. 'Item it is ordained that noe burgess, chencer, nor inhabitant of the said town shall not suffer any stranger within his house privily nor openly to buy nor to sell any manner of merchandizes against the royaltys of the said town and the freedom thereof, upon pain of xx.s.

27. 'Item it is ordained that noe manner of person shall hold nor open shop to cutt carne or trawntrey or ostrey hold, unless he be a burgess, yielding and paying by the appointment of the portreeve, upon pain of a grievous amerciament.

30. 'Item it is ordained that noe burgess shall not merchandize with noe strangers goods to their singular advantage and for to inhance merchandizes and for to imbeazle the lords royaltys, dutys

KENFIG. and customs, upon pain of high amerciamment at the portreeve's — pleasure.

32. 'Item it is ordained that noe chencer nor stranger shall buy any corn within the markett nor within the franchise of the said town, to be sold again, upon pain of amerciamment.

34. 'Item it is ordained that noe stranger shall buy any corn in the markett until the portreeve, aldermen and burgesses be served, except gentlemen for their own household, upon pain of amerciamment.

39. 'Item it is ordained that noe burgess shall buy no manner of wares, as boards, lathes, tyles, nor noe other chaffre for any strangers, whereby the libertys and freedom of the said town may be hurt and hindered to the annoyance of any other burgess, upon pain of three shillings and four pence at every fault and offence comitted therein.'—(Ibid., 246-250.)

KILKENNY.

William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, conferred various privileges upon his burgesses of Kilkenny (temp. Henry III):—
'Nulli mercatori extranio liceat discicionem pannorum facere vel tabernam vinorum habere in villa kylkenn' nisi per quadraginta dies, et si amplius hujusmodi [habere voluerit,] tantum [? tunc] faciat per communionem Burgensium ad proficuum ville [quod] remaneat. . . . Item liceat Burgensibus meis Gyldam mercatoriam & alias gildas habere & suos scotenos¹ cum omni libertate ad ipsos spectante, sicut consuetudo est aliarum bonarum villarum,' etc.—(Chartae, etc. Hiberniae, 34.)²

¹ This clause (totidem verbis) occurs in several Irish charters. See Chartae Hiberniae, 37, 39, 47, 84, and P. Gale, Inquiry into Corp. System, p. xii. 'Scotenos' seems to be a grant of the same privilege as 'hansam' or 'hansas' in the English charters.

² Cf. P. Gale, Inquiry into Corporate System of Ireland, App. No. 7.

The following and many other privileges and old usages of the KILKENNY. town were confirmed by Richard II in 1383:—‘Item elegi debent annuatim circa festum sancti michaelis in dicta villa duo prepositi de Chepmenesild ad faciendum que ad illum officium pertinent, & ipsi prepositi cognoscere debent coram eis de metis & bundis factis in dicta villa inter vicinum et vicinum¹, et si qui inde coram eis convicti fuerint per presentacionem vel ad sectam partis amerciammentur, & misericordia illa est quinque solidi, & illud amerciammentum vertatur in usum dicte ville. Item prepositi dicte ville habere debent correccionem de assisa panis & servicie & correccionem inde facere quociens defectus invenire contigerit, videlicet, per amerciammentum & penam pillorii juxta formam statuti inde editi. . . . Item clamant quod omnes laboratores, Furnitores, Cissores, Sutores, Fullones, Textrices, braceatores, pandaxatores & ceteri operarii & omnes Artifices infra metas ville manentes corrigantur per fines & amerciammenta coram Superiori & Prepositis ejusdem ville & non coram aliis; et illi fines & amerciammenta dividantur, videlicet, quorum medietas domino ville & talia medietas Superiori & Communitati ejusdem ville. Item clamant quod nullus forincecus seu extraneus mercator, cujuscumque condicionis fuerit, ad villam predictam tempore quocumque veniens cum mercimoniis suis, videlicet, ferro, sale & vino & aliis mercimoniis, habeat potestatem, nisi per licenciam Superioris & Burgensium ville predicte, dicta mercimonia vendicioni exponere; et si aliqua mercimonia predicta exponere vendicioni vel tabernam vinorum facere voluerint contra voluntatem Superioris et Burgensium dicte ville, quod illa mercimonia & vina sunt forisfacta dictis Superiori et communitati dicte ville, et predicti Superior et Burgenses habeant potestatem predicta forisfacta recipiendi & in usum dicti ville expendendi sine aliqua calumpnia cujuscumque Judicis. . . . Item clamant quod nulli extranii mercatores habeant potestatem aliquas pellas

¹ This is the function of the Dean of Gild in Scotland. In only one other charter (those of Scotland excepted) do I find this peculiar clause, i. e. in the charter of 13 Richard II to New Ross, confirming many old privileges granted in the time of Henry III,—Chartae Hiberniae, 85.

LEICESTER.

Robert, Earl of Mellent, bestowed the Gild upon his town of Leicester (1107–1118):—‘R. Comes de Mell’ R. pint’ [?Pincerne] atque omnibus baronibus suis Francigenis atque Anglicis tocius sue terre Anglie salutem. Sciatis me concessisse mercatoribus meis Leyc’ gildam eorum mērcatorum cum omnibus consuetudinibus quibus [i. e. quas] tenuerunt in tempore regis Willielmi et regis Willielmi filii eius et modo in tempore Henrici Regis. Teste R. filio Alcitilli.’—(Leic. Archives, Borough Charters, etc., fol. 68.)

His son, Robert Bossu, who died in 1168 or 1169, allowed the burgesses to hold the town of him at the old rate with an increment of £8. They were not to plead outside the town, but only at their portmanmote, and were to have their Gild Merchant. ‘Concedo etiam eis tenere gildam suam mercatoriam, sicut melius umquam tenuerunt tempore patris mei.’—(Gent. Magaz., 1851, vol. 35, p. 263.) He also granted them the following:—‘Robertus comes Leycestrie Radulpho vicecomiti et omnibus baronibus et hominibus suis Francigenis et Anglicis salutem. Sciatis quod ego et uolo et concedo quod burgenses mei de Leycestria teneant omnes consuetudines suas bene et in pace et honorifice et quiete in Gilda et in omnibus aliis consuetudinibus, sicut eas umquam melius et quietius et honorificentius de patre meo tenuerint. Testibus,’ etc.—(Rep. MSS. Com. 1881, p. 404.)

The subjoined charter was probably granted by Robert Bossu or by his father:—‘R. Comes Leycestrie omnibus fidelibus . . . [a blank] Anglie salutem. Sciatis me concessisse omnibus burgensibus meis leycest’ guildam marcatoriam cum omnibus consuetudinibus quas habebant in tempore patris mei et antecessorum meorum. Precipio ut bene et honorifice et quiete teneant ut unquam melius. Testibus, R. pint’, G. Turuill’, Ric. Magistro.’—(Leic. Archives, Borough Charters, etc., fol. 67.)

The town archives of Leicester contain many valuable Gild LEICESTER.
Rolls¹, extending from 8 Richard I to 4 Richard II. The oldest Roll begins thus: 'Isti intrauerunt in Gildam mercatoriam die Sancti Dionisii proxima post aduentum Comitis in Angliam post deliberacionem suam de captiuitate sua in Francia [1197], scilicet.' The third membrane of this Roll is headed: 'Isti sunt qui intrauerunt Gildam Mercatoriam die Martis primo post ascensionem domini anno primo post coronacionem Domini Regis Johannis.' In the year 1197 about 60 persons were enrolled, and in the four succeeding years 28, 111, 24 and 36 respectively. Subjoined are a few entries selected from the two earliest membranes (1197-1198):—

'Walterus de Nichol'; eius plegii, Wilke Waterman, Robertus scription of the contents of these important records.

LEICESTER. Simon cum Barba habet sedem patris sui.

— Henricus Morkor dedit iii.s. ; plegii sui ; et quietus de hansis et de omnibus ¹.'

Most of those admitted made a payment and presented two sureties. Among the names entered in the years 1200 and 1201 are William the stabler, Peter the carpenter, Osburn the farrier, Adam the miller and Gerald the baker. The Gild Rolls also contain the judicial proceedings of the Fraternity ; but its jurisdiction was confined to mercantile affairs.

Besides paying the entrance fees and finding two pledges or sureties for the fulfilment of his obligations, the new member took an oath of fealty to the Gild :—

'Le serment de ceux qentrunt la Gylde.—Ceo oyetz vos meyr et vos freres de la Gylde qe ieo leaument les leys de la Gylde tendray, et ma Gylde bien en totes eschoses sueray, et ou [i.e. oue] mes freres de la Gylde ou qe ieo soye escoteray, sur le fee le Euesque ou . . . [a blank ; supply 'deinz la fraunchise']. Et qe ieo garniray mon mair et le bone gentz de la commune, si ieo sasche nul home qe marchaunde deinze la fraunchise qe soit able dentrer la Gylde. Et qe ieo serry obedient et suaunt al comaundement del mair et a ses somounes, et les fraunchises et les bones custumes de la vile a mon poer meynteneray. Si deux me ayde et ses seynz. Amen.'—(Leic. Archives, Borough Charters, etc., fol. 10.)

The above is in the handwriting of the thirteenth century. The same oath in English was used in the fifteenth century :—

Form / 'The Oath of them that enter into the Chapman Gild.—This hear you, Mayor and ye Brethren of the Gilde, that I truly the customs of my Gilde shall lawfully hold, and my Gild in all things serve. I shall lote and scot with my brethren of the Gild, whether I dwell in the town fraunchises, or in the Bishop Fee, or in any other place. Also I shall warne Mr. Mayor and the good folks of the town if I know any man that merchandizeth within the fraunches of this town, that been able to enter into

In the 'Constitutions' made by the Mayor and the whole the borough. The writer further concluded that the Merchant Guild merged in the Corporation erected in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and that the members of the Guild acquired the name of "freemen" at the same period.'—(Munic. Hist., p. ix.) In the first volume of this work we have pointed out that some of these conclusions are not tenable.

Subjoined is a brief survey of some of the transactions of the Gild at its meetings, which were called 'morrow-speeches' ('morwenspeche') :—

/ A. D. 1254.—Roger Alditch was charged with offending the laws of the Gild, having made a blanket in one part of which was a good woof, but elsewhere in many places weak stuff. He also caused a piece of weak and inferior vermilion cloth to be attached to a good piece of the same kind of cloth. It was adjudged that he should pay a fine of 6s. 8d. and, if he should commit another offence against the Gild, he should be expelled. William of Ayleston was accused of having sold the wool of the men of Hinckley and Coventry against the rule of the Gild. He was fined 60s. Robert of Kent was charged with selling the wool of strangers, contrary to the law of the Gild. William of Pailington transgressed in the same way.—(Thompson, Leic., 68, 69.)

A. D. 1257.—The whole Gild in full assembly agreed that the Leicester merchants going to the next fair at Stamford with wool, cloth and skins should have them carried to the shops in which the Leicester merchandise was usually deposited and cause them to be opened there in presence of the neighbours. Then they could take them where they pleased. Regulations were also made for the Leicester clothiers and wool-dealers, going to the next fair of St. Botolph.—(Ibid., 75-76.)

/ Hugh at the Solar having struck Roger Alditch in the market of St. Botolph, and the latter having struck the former, both were fined a tun of beer by the community of the Gild. The words 'tunata cervisie' often occur as the amount of the fines to be paid; the brethren probably partook of this beer at the morrow-speeches. —(Ibid., 77.)

Membr

LEICESTER. 44 Henry III.—John Keling was charged with trafficking with money of a man not in the Gild and receiving a share in the profits. He was fined 12*d.* Three others were fined for a like offence. In September of the same year it was ordered that no gildsman should sell wool or other merchandise in Leicester, the property of strangers, for a share of the profits accruing therefrom, to the detriment of the liberties of the Gild¹.—(Ibid., 78–79.)

A.D. 1261.—Regulations were made for the clothiers and drapers at the fair of St. Botolph.—(Ibid., 79.)

A.D. 1265.—It was ordered by the Gild that the weavers of Leicester should be allowed to weave as well by night as by day; that they should take for every ell of each kind of cloth a farthing, russets excepted, and for the latter three farthings; and that they should not be permitted to weave cloth for the men of other towns, while they had sufficient work to do for the men of Leicester.—(Ibid., 84.)

A.D. 1467.—At a Common Hall it was agreed that in the future none should enter the guildhall at any Common Hall there held, except persons franchised, that is to say, entered into the Chapman's Gild.—(Ibid., 187.)

In the middle of the fifteenth century the wardens and members of the Tailors' Company enacted that no tailor should set up his craft as a master within the town, unless the wardens of the craft brought in 10*s.* in money, to be paid to the chamberlains of the town for his duty to the Chapman's Gild, upon pain of forfeiting 20*s.* of the gild of tailors' money.—(Ibid., 228.)

During the reign of Henry VII there are entries of freemen admitted into the 'Gild Merchant.'—(Ibid., 226.)

From the time of Elizabeth 'the municipal body ceased to be known as the Merchant Guild and was ordinarily called the Incorporation, or by the abbreviated form of the term, the Corporation.'—(Thompson, Munic. Hist., 86.)

¹ Similar entries occur frequently in the Gild Rolls, the culprit being punished for forming a partnership with non-gildsmen,—'quia habuit societatem in mercimonio [or 'mercandizis'] cum,' etc.

LEWES.

‘Reginaldus de Warrenna vicecomiti de Lewiis et omnibus LEWES. baronibus Comitibus ceterisque uniuersis eiusdem hominibus tam francis quam anglicis salutem. Notum uobis sit quod ego communi consilio prioris de Sancto Pancratio et baronum consulis reddidi Burgensibus lewiensibus mercatoriam Ghildam cum omnibus consuetudinibus et dignitatibus que ad illam pertinent, tam quietam et liberam sicut habuerunt illam in tempore aui et patris mei, pro xx. sol. reddendo annuatim prefecture de Lewiis, et tali conuencione quod si dominus Comes reduxerit, pro posse meo faciam quod eis ipse predicto pacto prefatam Gildam concedet; si non autem, faciam pro posse meo quod dominus meus Comes Willielmus [de Blois] filius Regis eis eandam concedet Ghildam. LICHFIELD².

The Gild of Lichfield was established in the year 1387 by a charter of Richard II. Besides the master, four wardens and brethren, there were five priests belonging to the Fraternity. In the year 2 Henry VII the Gild made certain regulations ‘for the worship of the City, unity, peace and welfare of the Commonalty.’ The Master of the Gild and the forty-eight were steadfastly to abide together and see that good rule be kept in the City. The other ordinances relate to frays with blood-shed, to vagabonds, scolding women, etc. It is evident that this Fraternity was the governing body of the town.—(Harwood, Lichfield, 311–314.)

¹ The membrane in the Cotton MS. is evidently the original; it was probably granted during the reign of Stephen. The ‘Comes’ referred to was Reginald’s brother, the third Earl Warren. Cf. Horsfield, Lewes, i. 168–170; Turner, The Ancient Merchant Guild of Lewes, Sussex Archaeol. Collect., vol. xxi. 96–97.

LICHFIELD. — Soon after the dissolution of the Gild (2 Edward VI), the City was incorporated, two bailiffs and twenty-four burgesses being appointed, twelve of whom had been masters of the Gild.— (Ibid., 334.)

The Bodleian Library has various documents relating to this Fraternity. Ashmole MS. 855, 'Collections concerning the Antiquities and History of the City of Lichfield,' contains indentures of lands belonging to the Gild (fol. 232), and ordinances of the Gild of our Lady and St. John the Baptist, founded in the year 1387 (ff. 243-249). Ashmole MS. 1521 A. is entitled 'Liber Fratrum Gildae et Fraternitatis in villa de Lichfeild in honore gloriosae virginis, seu ejusdem Institutio et Leges ; nomina magistrorum et Fundatorum atque Omnium Fratrum Sororumque nomina,' etc. (1387-1444). Ashmole MS. 1521 B., ff. 53-57, contains the ordinances of the Gild made in the reign of Henry VII.

Neither in Harwood's account of this body, nor in the Bodleian MSS. do we meet with the term 'Gilda Mercatoria.' The Lichfield Fraternity has a strong religious colouring ; and there is a marked absence of mercantile regulations among its ordinances.

LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL. Liverpool received a grant of the Gild Merchant from Henry III (1229)¹, but it was annulled by the charter of Richard II (1382):—‘Illa clausula superius [i.e. in the charter of Henry III] expressa, quod nullus qui non sit de gilda illa mercandisam aliquam in predicto burgo faciat nisi de voluntate eorundum burgensium, penitus excepta.’ Henry IV inspected the charters of his predecessors without excepting the Gild, but in Queen Mary’s grant of the year 1555 the Gild is again excepted.—(Picton, Memorials of Liv., i. 31, 49.)²

In the year 1552 two seneschals of the Gild Court and two Leavelookers are mentioned.—(Picton, Selections from Liv. Archives, 59.)

A.D. 1565.—At a Port Moot of the Burgesses it is recorded: ‘We find and order that all wares transported and brought into this borough Corporate and Port town forth of the Queen’s Majesty’s realm of Ireland by the way of merchandize, shall be brought into the common hall, that is to wit into the common warehouse of this town, and that all such wares sold or bartered between foreigner and foreigner shall be forfeit as foreign bought and foreign sold,—felts and yarn only excepted,—and that it shall be lawful for any freeman of this town to seize and take the same.

‘Also we find, order, and decree, that no foreigner, as men of Bolton, Blackburne or any other places, sell any iron, wood, or any other kind of wares to any foreign person other than to a freeman of this town, on pain of forfeiture of the same.’
—(Ibid., 75.)

Produce imported was first to be offered for sale to ‘the mayor and town.’ A value was put upon it by the four Prizers (i.e. appraisers). If the merchant did not accept the price offered

1591, March 23rd, at an Assembly,—‘It was inquired whether corne or other victuals cominge or to be broughte unto this saide towne and porte of Liverpoole by waye of merchandize may lawfullie and by the orders of this howse be bargained and bought by anie freeman of this towne wthoute the speciall licence and consente of Mr. Maior of the same towne for the tyme being, wth the assente also of the aldermen his brethren and burgesses, the same goods being before proffered to the towne to be solde. Whereunto all the wholl assemblie (by poles and afterwards wth a generall voice) made answer saying yt was not lawfull for anie one to bargain or buie any of the commodities above mentioned, the same beinge first (to be) proffred to the towne to be solde as is above said.’ An offence committed by Gyles Brooke ‘of this towne merchant’ was put over to another day.—(Ibid., 81–82.)

1591, April 14th.—‘Item, concerninge certen Tallowe called rendered tallowe, brought hither for a towne’s bargain, the quantitie whereof beinge soe small as but fyve cwt. or thereabouts, yt is therefore thought mete and soe agreed upon by a common consente, that from henceforth anie freeman of this said towne, one or moe, may bargaine and buy as well the said quantitie of tallowe above mencioned as all other such like w^{ch}

And the like order and rule to be observed for corne and graine.'—(Picton, Selections, 82–83.)

The oath of the Burgess of Liverpool in 1610 contained this clause:—'Youe shall lykewise, by no coloure, covin or deceipte, free anie forrenier, or the goods, catails or merchandizes of anie forreigner, or other person whatsoever not free within this towne, in the name of yo^r proper goods, cataills, or merchaundize, whereby the Quene's Majesties custome, her heirs and successors, and the custome of this towne or either of them, shall or maye in anie wise be impeached, empayred, hindred, delaied, or embeselled.'—(Ibid., 121.)

LLANTRISSAINT.

Hugh le Despenser granted to his burgesses of Llantrissaint, A.D. 1346. among other immunities (20 Edw. III):—'quod burgenses nostri predicti esse non debeant receptores denariorum nostrorum nisi ta[n]tu[m] de denariis exeuntibus de balliva Prepositatus eiusdem ville nostre, nec aliquis seldam apertam de aliquibus merchandisis nec tabernam nec corf faciant in eadem villa nostra, nisi fuerit cum predictis burgensibus nostris [in] locamum [i.e. lotamum] et scotamum et infra guldam libertatum receptus. Nec non concessimus eisdem burgensibus nostris quod ipsi et successores sui guldam inter eos facere possint quo tempore et quandocunque voluerint ad proficuum ipsorum.'—(Archaeol. Journal, xxix. 352.)

LYNN REGIS.

The Gild Merchant is mentioned in charters granted to Lynn LYNN REGIS.
in the years 6 John and 33 Edward I¹. The latter concedes :
'quod ipsi et eorum heredes ac successores burgenses uille pre-dicte in perpetuum habeant gildam suam mercatoriam cum omnibus terris et edificiis ad gildam illam pertinentibus, saluis capitalibus dominicis serviciis inde debitis et consuetis.'—(Town Archives of Lynn, Aa. 6.) A charter of Henry V ordains that the Alderman of the Gild should choose four of the most sufficient Burgesses, who were to add eight others to their number. These twelve were to elect one of the twenty-four Jurats Mayor, and to appoint the other town officers².

Almost all men of note in the town were members of this
'Gild Merchant of the Holy Trinity,' which was very intimately connected with the Corporation of Lynn, as is evident from the documents given below. 'The Alderman of it was always the leading man of the 24 Jurats, next to the Mayor in importance ;
and its funds were always at the service of the Corporation, and served to stop a gap on many a pressing emergency. At one time the income of the Guild was from £300 to £400 (which represents at least from £3000 to £4000 of our money). Much of the Corporation property at the present day originally belonged to the Trinity Guild³. Prominent in the town, in the centre of the Saturday Market place, stands the Guildhall, formerly the Hall of the Trinity Guild.'—'There never was any great work going on for the advantage of the town to which it did not largely contribute. The conduit of St. Margaret at one time, the town defences at another, the church and chapels, all were largely indebted for gifts or loans.' During the reign of Henry V, the Gild held the bonds of the Corporation for loans of more than £450.—(Harrod, Report, 26-27, 31.)

There are twenty-nine Account Rolls, most of them consisting of several membranes each. The contents relate chiefly to entrance-fees, the sale of mill-stones, marble and other stones, rents of houses belonging to the Gild, 'cranage, kayage and plankage,' the stipends of chaplains, alms, expenses for burials and festivities, arrears of the 'scabini' and members, and miscellaneous expenses. The old name 'gilda mercatoria' still continued to be used:—'Computus . . . vnus scabini Gilde Mercatorie Sancte Trinitatis' (8-9 Richard II.—Gd. 50-51.)

In a long composition made between the Bishop of Norwich, and the Mayor and Community of Lynn (A.D. 1309), we find the following:—'Concesserunt eciam Major et Communitas antedicta ut omnes ordinationes et statuta Gyldarum uel eciam ipsius Communitatis, si que fuerint, per quas vel que libertas vendendi et emendi in dicta villa Lenn' fuerit impedita, quominus Comburgenses ville predictae possent libere mercandisare uel extranei quicunque pro estoueriis propriis necessaria sibi emere, vt in molis uel aliis mercandis quibuscunque, ad dampnum tam Communitatis ipsius quam totius patrie adiacentis, amodo et exnunc reuocentur et annullentur, nec talia fiant in futurum; et si de ipsa Communitate aliquis in hoc culpabilis in posterum reperiatur per ballivos et ministros Episcopi ad querelam cuiuscunque ex hoc lesi debitam facere teneatur emendam, quocienscunque et quandocunque de hoc ministris dicti Episcopi constiterit legitime. Ashmole MS. 1521 B., ff. 53-57, contains the ordinances of the Gild made in the reign of Henry VII.

Neither in Harwood's account of this body, nor in the Bodleian MSS. do we meet with the term 'Gilda Mercatoria.' The Lichfield Fraternity has a strong religious colouring ; and there is a marked absence of mercantile regulations among its ordinances.

The subjoined account of the Trinity Gild with the 'Rules and Ordinances' and 'Usages and Customs' is taken from Richards' History of Lynn :—

'This Guild was said to have its rise and beginning before the reign of King John, as appears from the answer of Thomas Botesham, alderman of it, and his brethren, in the time of Richard II, to a writ of enquiry of that king relating to its foundation, authority, &c. : that its origin was not known, that King John, considering the great concourse of merchants to this town, granted the alderman that then was, and the commonalty and their successors, by Letters patents, bearing date in his sixth year, that they might have a guild of merchants in the said town ; and Henry III., son to the said King John, by his Letters patents, granted one of their own body and community to be mayor of the said town, which said mayor and alderman for the time being, should always have the rule and government of it ; and which said alderman, in the vacancy of a mayor, or in the

1591, March 23rd, at an Assembly,—‘It was inquired whether corne or other victuals cominge or to be broughte unto this saide towne and porte of Liverpoole by waye of merchandize may lawfullie and by the orders of this howse be bargained and bought by anie freeman of this towne wthoute the speciall licence and consente of Mr. Maior of the same towne for the tyme being, wth the assente also of the aldermen his brethren and burgesses, the same goods being before proffered to the towne to be solde. Whereunto all the wholl assemblie (by poles and afterwards wth a generall voice) made answer saying yt was not lawfull for anie one to bargain or buie any of the commodities above mentioned, the same beinge first (to be) proffred to the towne to be solde as is above said.’ An offence committed by Gyles Brooke ‘of this towne merchant’ was put over to another day.—(Ibid., 81–82.)

1591, April 14th.—‘Item, concerninge certen Tallowe called rendered tallowe, brought hither for a towne’s bargain, the quantitie whereof beinge soe small as but fyve cwt. or thereabouts, yt is therefore thought mete and soe agreed upon by a common consente, that from henceforth anie freeman of this said towne, one or moe, may bargaine and buy as well the said quantitie of tallowe above mencioned as all other such like w^{ch}

And that the first buier of the same shall, upon suche bargain or contracte made, geve undelaied notice and knowledge hereof to Mr. Maior of this towne for the tyme beinge or to his deputie, soe as either proclamacion maye be made or els particular warninge be geven at everie freeman's house by the under-bailiff to the same effects. And the like order and rule to be observed for corne and graine.'—(Picton, Selections, 82–83.)

The oath of the Burgess of Liverpool in 1610 contained this clause:—'Youe shall lykewise, by no coloure, covin or deceipte, free anie forrenier, or the goods, catails or merchandizes of anie forreigner, or other person whatsoever not free within this towne, in the name of yo^r proper goods, cataills, or merchaundize, whereby the Quene's Majesties custome, her heirs and successors, and the custome of this towne or either of them, shall or maye in anie wise be impeached, empayred, hindred, delaied, or embeselled.'—(Ibid., 121.)

LLANTRISSAINT.

Hugh le Despenser granted to his burgesses of Llantrissaint, A.D. 1346. among other immunities (20 Edw. III):—'quod burgenses nostri predicti esse non debeant receptores denariorum nostrorum nisi ta[ntu]m de denariis exeuntibus de balliva Prepositatus eiusdem ville nostre, nec aliquis seldam apertam de aliquibus merchandisis nec tabernam nec corf faciant in eadem villa nostra, nisi fuerit cum predictis burgensibus nostris [in] locamum [i.e. lotamum] et scotamum et infra guldam libertatum receptus. Nec non concessimus eisdem burgensibus nostris quod ipsi et successores sui guldam inter eos facere possint quo tempore et quandocunque voluerint ad proficuum ipsorum.'—(Archaeol. Journal, xxix. 352.)

LYNN REGIS.

The Gild Merchant is mentioned in charters granted to Lynn LYNN REGIS.
in the years 6 John and 33 Edward I¹. The latter concedes :
'quod ipsi et eorum heredes ac successores burgenses uille pre-dicte in perpetuum habeant gildam suam mercatoriam cum omnibus terris et edificiis ad gildam illam pertinentibus, saluis capitalibus dominicis serviciis inde debitis et consuetis.'—(Town Archives of Lynn, Aa. 6.) A charter of Henry V ordains that the Alderman of the Gild should choose four of the most
number. These twelve were to elect one of the twenty-four Jurats Mayor, and to appoint the other town officers².

Almost all men of note in the town were members of this
'Gild Merchant of the Holy Trinity,' which was very intimately connected with the Corporation of Lynn, as is evident from the documents given below. 'The Alderman of it was always the leading man of the 24 Jurats, next to the Mayor in importance ;
and its funds were always at the service of the Corporation, and served to stop a gap on many a pressing emergency. At one time the income of the Guild was from £300 to £400 (which represents at least from £3000 to £4000 of our money). Much of the Corporation property at the present day originally belonged to the Trinity Guild³. Prominent in the town, in the centre of the Saturday Market place, stands the Guildhall, formerly the Hall of the Trinity Guild.'—'There never was any great work going on for the advantage of the town to which it did not largely contribute. The conduit of St. Margaret at one time, the town defences at another, the church and chapels, all were largely indebted for gifts or loans.' During the reign of Henry V, the Gild held the bonds of the Corporation for loans of more than £450.—(Harrod, Report, 26-27, 31.)

The archives of Lynn are rich in materials illustrating the

LYNN REGIS.

15. If any one refuse to obey the precept of the alderman, or dean, for the honour and profit of the house, he is to be amerced 12s.

16. If any poor brother shall dye, the alderman and brethren shall see that his body be honourably buried, of the goods, or chattels of the house, or out of alms, if he has not wherewith to bury himself.

17. If the alderman shall dye, none belonging to him, neither son, or any other can act in anything as alderman, but the brethren may choose a new alderman, whom they please.

18. If any brother shall dye, the dean is to summons all the brethren to make their offerings for the soul of the deceased ; and if any one is absent, he is to give one halfpenny at the next prime following, for the soul of the defunct, and the dean is to have 4d. of the alms collected for citing the brethren.

19. If any brother, or alderman shall act contrary to the ordinances of this house, he is either to forfeit his brotherhood, or pay half a mark for the good of the house.

20. No one shall intrude himself while the drinking continues.

21. If any brother shall offend another brother, in word or deed, he shall make no complaint but to the alderman first, and the mayor ; if he does not, he is to be amerced half a mark.

22. If the skivins shall merchandize with the chattels of the house, no brother shall have any part therein, but the whole profit to go to the use of the guild.

23. The skivins are to swear, when they receive the chattels of the house, that they will employ the same faithfully to the good of the guild, and will fully account and answer for the profit.'

There are twenty-nine Account Rolls, most of them consisting of several membranes each. The contents relate chiefly to entrance-fees, the sale of mill-stones, marble and other stones, rents of houses belonging to the Gild, 'cranage, kayage and plankage,' the stipends of chaplains, alms, expenses for burials and festivities, arrears of the 'scabini' and members, and miscellaneous expenses. The old name 'gilda mercatoria' still continued to be used:—'Computus . . . vnus scabini Gilde Mercatorie Sancte Trinitatis' (8–9 Richard II.—Gd. 50–51.)

In a long composition made between the Bishop of Norwich, and the Mayor and Community of Lynn (A.D. 1309), we find the following:—'Concesserunt eciam Major et Communitas antedicta ut omnes ordinaciones et statuta Gyldarum uel eciam ipsius Communitatis, si que fuerint, per quas vel que libertas vendendi et emendi in dicta villa Lenn' fuerit impedita, quominus Comburgenses ville predicte possent libere mercandisare uel extranei quicunque pro estoueriis propriis necessaria sibi emere, vt in molis uel aliis mercandisis quibuscunque, ad dampnum tam Communitatis ipsius quam tocius patrie adiacentis, amodo et exnunc reuocentur et annullentur, nec talia fiant in futurum; et si de ipsa Communitate aliquis in hoc culpabilis in posterum reperiatur per ballivos et ministros Episcopi ad querelam cuiuscunque ex hoc lesi debitam facere teneatur emendam, quocienscunque et quandocunque de hoc ministris dicti Episcopi constiterit legitime. LICHFIELD. — Soon after the dissolution of the Gild (2 Edward VI), the City was incorporated, two bailiffs and twenty-four burgesses being appointed, twelve of whom had been masters of the Gild.— (Ibid., 334.)

The Bodleian Library has various documents relating to this Fraternity. Ashmole MS. 855, 'Collections concerning the Antiquities and History of the City of Lichfield,' contains indentures of lands belonging to the Gild (fol. 232), and ordinances of the Gild of our Lady and St. John the Baptist, founded in the year 1387 (ff. 243-249). Ashmole MS. 1521 A. is entitled 'Liber Fratrum Gildae et Fraternitatis in villa de Lichfeild in honore gloriosae virginis, seu ejusdem Institutio et Leges ; nomina magistrorum et Fundatorum atque Omnium Fratrum Sororumque nomina,' etc. (1387-1444). Ashmole MS. 1521 B., ff. 53-57, contains the ordinances of the Gild made in the reign of Henry VII.

Neither in Harwood's account of this body, nor in the Bodleian MSS. do we meet with the term 'Gilda Mercatoria.' The Lichfield Fraternity has a strong religious colouring ; and there is a marked absence of mercantile regulations among its ordinances.

The Trinity Gild is also mentioned in an inquisition of 3 Henry V. In the year 13 Henry IV. several merchants, with a great multitude of adherents, elected the Mayor of Lynn contrary to the liberties and custom of the burgesses, 'ad dampnum proborum burgensium.' While he was in office he and his followers made 'diversos forinsecos habitantes' burgesses, 'contra voluntatem proborum burgensium.' Again, 2 Henry V, 'sine consensu Burgensum et Majorum,' they quitclaimed the debts of the town. The jurors testified that in 1 Henry V these men and others came 'ad Gildam aulam sancte Trinitatis de eadem et ibidem noctanter super fratres eiusdem Gilde violenter et maliciose super eos insultum fecerunt' to the great injury of the brethren. In 2 Henry V certain 'probi viri' were attacked by the accused 'cum magna multitudine populi.' In the same year they prevent the 'probi homines' from electing the mayor,—'probos burgenses et majores ab antiquo electos venire . . . ad faciendum dictam electionem majoris.'—(Petyt MS., ii. 82-86.)

The Fraternity was dissolved November 4th, 1547, and most of its property was vested in the Corporation of the town. Among the goods which the latter received was a stock of millstones valued at £40.—(Richards, 450, 468, 472.)²

NANTWICH.

'With respect to its ancient jurisdiction, it appears that there was established here soon after the Conquest a Mercatorial Guild or Brotherhood, being a politic institution, and the groundwork of Bodies Corporate In judicial matters this Guild had the assistance of the Court Leet, and it provided six perpetual Chaplains to say mass for the brethren belonging to it. It is supposed that this Institution is the same noticed on an inscription in the Church, as being the Brethren and Sisters of the Holy Cross. They were suppressed and the revenues forfeited under the statute of Edward VI; notwithstanding which a bailiff, one of its chief officers, continued to be chosen annually at the Leet, and was considered the first officer in the town, although he possessed not a tittle of legal authority. This election, however, which took place at the first Court after Michaelmas, ultimately fell into neglect, and the present jurisdiction of the town is vested in the Constables. The other ancient officers of the Guild were the Rulers of the Walling, the Heath Keepers, the Leave Lookers, the Ale Tasters, the Fire Lookers, and the Kennel

Lookers. The Leave Lookers was an office of some authority; they inspected the markets, regulated the weights and measures, and destroyed all unwholesome meat.'—(Hanshall, Cheshire, 490–491.)¹ NANTWICH. —

Thomas le Despenser, son of Edward le Despenser, in the year A.D. 1359. 1397, inspected and confirmed an earlier charter (33 Edward III) in which the Gild is mentioned :—'Concessimus etiam prefatis Burgensibus nostris et eorum successoribus quod de cetero nullus Wallensis nec aliquis alius aliquam libertatem habeat ratione alicujus Burgagii in Burgo nostro predicto, nisi fuerit ibidem residens, videlicet, Potwallinge et cum eis Lotans et Scotans et infra guildam libertatis eorum receptus.' Thomas granted his burgesses of Neath, among other liberties :—'Quod nullus extraneus extra nundinas et ferias infra bundas praedictas aliquas mercandizas de aliquo extraneo emat nisi tum [i.e. tantum] de Burgensibus nostris Villae nostrae praedictae ratione merchandizarum, nec aliquis teneat seldam apertam de aliquibus merchandizis nec tabernam, nec corff faciat in villa praedicta, nisi fuerit cum praedictis Burgensibus lotans et scotans et infra Guildam libertatis eorum receptus. Necnon concessimus eisdem Burgensibus quod ipsi et haeredes eorum Guildam facere possint quo tempore et quecunque [? quandocunque] voluerint, ad proficuum ipsorum. Insuper concessimus predictis Burgensibus quod omnes mercatores tam pannarii, cerdone, pelliparii, chirothecarii, quam alii diversi qui ex venditione et emptione vivant infra dominium nostrum Glamorganiae et Morganiae, residere debeant in villa de Burgh et non upland, et omnimodas mercandizas faciant in nundinis, feriis et in villis de Burgh, et non alibi. Et etiam quod omnes mercatores cum eorum merchandizis alibi non transeant quam per regales vicos [et] per villas de Burgh. Ita quod nos nec haeredes nostri Tolnetum nostrum nec alias custumas

NEWCASTLE the objection. After the guilds are thus called, the assemblage UPON TYNE. is dismissed, and the Mayor retires.

'Now it is to be observed, that nothing passes in Guild which can shew that court's power to do any one thing ;—no record is kept beyond this list of claimants ;—no motion is put, nor any other made ; for the Mayor, pursuant to instructions received from the Common Council, declines putting any motion ; and the book, which is commonly called the Guild Book, is, in fact, merely an extract from the different petitions for the freedom, presented to the Common Council by the claimants. It seems to be read over, not because the sanction of the guild is required to confer the freedom, but merely because the Common Council are willing to know if any objection exists among the freemen to the different claims for the freelage. This list of petitions might as well be read over anywhere else to the freemen ; and it is an illusion to call such a list "The Guild Book."

'How it has come to pass, that the Guild is thus rendered so entirely a nonentity, it is difficult to say. . . . The Court of Guild at present, in point of fact, is not allowed to make any order, or to exercise any authority ; and thus the whole body of the Corporation, assembled together by ancient custom and by charter, is considered a nullity ; and the power is confined to the Common Council. Endeavours have often been used to restore the Guild to its functions, by making motions for orders ; but hitherto without success.'—(Brown, Short Account of Customs of Newc., 1823, pp. 14-17.)

The Commissioners on Municipal Corporations reported in 1835 that 'guilds are holden at the Guildhall three times in every year. They are composed of the mayor and the whole body of burgesses. The business transacted there consists of making proclamations for freedoms. At these meetings also, the stewards of the several companies and burgesses state to the mayor any grievances they have to complain of.'—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, p. 1642.)

chants of Newcastle are an antient guild of merchants ever since

NEWCASTLE- the 17th yeare of King John, which is a year before the grant to UPON-TYNE. the merchants of London¹.—(Brand, ii. 219.)

The following relates to Newcastle in the year 1777:—‘The fellowship with the whole body of the burgesses is called the freedom of the town, and may be taken up without that of the company.’ This freedom of the town entitles one to a vote for representatives to parliament, to exemption from tolls and to common pasture. The fellowship with a particular trade is called the freedom of the company, which joined to residency entitles him to the further additions of enfranchising apprentices, serving on juries and holding offices. ‘The court of Guild consists of the mayor and burgesses at large, assembled together, every one of whom has an equal voice, the Mayor having the casting vote.’ The laws made in guild are not binding, except the same be ratified by the Common Council.—(Collier, Essay on Charters, 83, 84, 99, 100.)²

‘The powers to be exercised by the Court of Guild in the affairs of the Corporation, are by the charters clearly and definitely expressed; and were it otherwise, the guild being the assemblage of the whole Corporation, it might be supposed the proceedings of that body would be of great authority; yet it has so happened, that in fact the Court of Guild is now utterly bereft of power. It being maintained at present by the Common Council, that the Court of Guild is absolutely without authority of any kind or description—that it is a form, and nothing else.

‘Merely the periods, therefore, at which the Guild is held, and the routine gone through, shall here be stated. There are three guilds every year, which are held in the Guildhall, viz.—On the third Monday after Christmas-day; the second Monday after when the Mayor presides, and such burgesses attend as think proper. The Sheriff's Serjeant opens each guild by making a proclamation in these words:—

“Oyez! Oyez! All persons having anything to do at a guild, held this day, before the Right Worshipful ——— Mayor, let them come forward, and they shall be heard.—All non-freemen are commanded to depart, under forfeiture of five pounds, and pain of imprisonment.”

‘After these words are repeated, it is customary for the Chairman of the Stewards to call over a list of the companies, whose stewards, or some member of the company, answer. This is done in order that no guilds may be allowed to pass without the presence of the steward of the company to which the claimant belongs, or some one to represent it; the presence of such steward, (if the guild be not stopped by him), shewing that the company does not object to the claim. After this list is called, the stewards, by their chairman and other freemen, state such grievances, and put such questions to the Mayor as they think proper; and generally are answered by the Mayor or some of the Aldermen from the bench; the Mayor also occasionally communicates to the burgesses present any decisions come to by the Common Council, on questions of interest to the body at large. Some years ago, the Mayor and Aldermen present at the guild, were in the habit of endeavouring to pass on to calling the guilds, without listening to any statements made by the stewards or freemen; but in this respect, they have given way; and the stewards and freemen exercise full liberty of speech at the guilds. After they have stated all they think necessary, the Town Clerk, who always attends, proceeds to call the guilds, that is, reads a list of the persons claiming to be admitted to the freedom of the town. Any freeman, who objects to the persons claiming, has the power to stop his guild, viz. he repeats the words “I stop that guild.” The Town Clerk then writes in the book, “Stopped by ———”; and the Common Council, being petitioned at a subsequent period by such claimant, decides on the validity of the objection. After the guilds are thus called, the assemblage is dismissed, and the Mayor retires.

‘Now it is to be observed, that nothing passes in Guild which can shew that court’s power to do any one thing ;—no record is kept beyond this list of claimants ;—no motion is put, nor any other made ; for the Mayor, pursuant to instructions received from the Common Council, declines putting any motion ; and the book, which is commonly called the Guild Book, is, in fact, merely an extract from the different petitions for the freedom, presented to the Common Council by the claimants. It seems to be read over, not because the sanction of the guild is required to confer the freedom, but merely because the Common Council are willing to know if any objection exists among the freemen to the different claims for the freelage. This list of petitions might as well be read over anywhere else to the freemen ; and it is an illusion to call such a list “The Guild Book.”

‘How it has come to pass, that the Guild is thus rendered so entirely a nonentity, it is difficult to say. . . . The Court of Guild at present, in point of fact, is not allowed to make any order, or to exercise any authority ; and thus the whole body of the Corporation, assembled together by ancient custom and by charter, is considered a nullity ; and the power is confined to the Common Council. Endeavours have often been used to restore the Guild to its functions, by making motions for orders ; but hitherto without success.’—(Brown, Short Account of Customs of Newc., 1823, pp. 14-17.)

The Commissioners on Municipal Corporations reported in 1835 that ‘guilds are holden at the Guildhall three times in every year. They are composed of the mayor and the whole body of burgesses. The business transacted there consists of making proclamations for freedoms. At these meetings also, the stewards of the several companies and burgesses state to the mayor any grievances they have to complain of.’—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, p. 1642.)

NEWPORT IN WENTLOOG.

NEWPORT IN WENTLOOG.

In the year 1385 Hugh, Earl of Stafford, granted a charter to his burgesses of Newport, which among other liberties mentions the Gild :—

‘Concessimus eciam Burgensibus nostris et heredibus et successoribus suis quod nullus teneat seldam apertam de aliquibus mercandisis nec tabernam nec corficinam nec aliquam cissuram artificii seu vitallariorum faciat in Villa nostra predicta, nisi fuerit cum predictis Burgensibus nostris commorans et residens et infra Gildam libertatis eorum receptus.

This charter was confirmed by Hugh's grandson Humphrey, Earl of Stafford, 8 Richard II.—(Ibid., 432.)

NORWICH.

A charter of 40 Henry III to the citizens of Norwich contains A.D. 1250. the clause :—‘Quod singuli mercatores communicantes libertatibus suis et mercandisis sint ad lottum et scottum eorundem civium, et ad auxilia prestanda, ubicunque fecerint residentiam, sicut esse debent et solent, et quod nulla gilda de cetero teneatur in civitate predicta ad detrimentum ejusdem civitatis.’—(Blomefield, Norfolk, iii. 51.)

In 1379 a royal charter granted :—‘quod nullus alius extraneus a libertate sua Norwici emat vel vendat victualia seu mercandisas aliquas ad retalliam, vel per parcellas, infra libertates civitatis predictae, nisi secundum formam et tenorem statuti nostri, in parlamento nostro apud Gloucestriam’ editi¹.—(Ibid., 104.)

The following is taken from a long composition entered into by the citizens of Norwich in 1414 :—‘& yt alle maner of men now Citezeyns of ye Cite shal be enrolled of what craft

OXFORD.

Charters of 1 John, 13 Henry III and 1 Edward III specify the Gild among the liberties of Oxford¹. That of Edward III

A.D. 1327. contains the clause:—'Et quod nullus qui non sit de eorum gilda vina aliqua seu mercimonia aut quecumque alia bona venalia infra dictam villam Oxon' vel ejus suburbia ad retalliam vendat.'

A.D. 1320. An inspeximus of 13 Edward II to the Abbey of Oseney speaks of:—'concessionem, etc. necnon donationem quas Will. de Chene aldermanus de gilda mercatorum Oxen' per cartam suam, de concensu et voluntate civium Oxenefordiae de communi civitatis et de gilda praedicta, fecit ecclesiae et canonicis praedictis in perpetuam elemosinam, de insula quae Middleleya vocatur, quam dicti cives praefato Willielmo in perpetuum feodum concesserunt.'—(Monast. Anglic., vi. 254.)

This grant of Wm. de Chene, in a mutilated condition, is to be found in the Register of the Abbey of Oseney:—'Will. de Chene Salutem. Sciatis quod . . . qui fuit aldremannus de [Gilda mercatorum] . . . luce Regis Stephani et Regine . . . concedo in perpetuam elemosinam . . . Marie de Oseneia et Canonicis . . . insulam que Middleleia uocatur, quam ciues de Oxen' de communi ciuitatis et de Gilda mercatorum michi in perpetuum feodum concesserunt. Et hoc facio predictorum ciuium consensu et voluntate,' etc.—(MS. Cotton, Vitell. E. XV, fol. 89.)

Oct. 23, 1534.—'Also it ys enacted and agreed by the same Mair, Aldermen, Bailyffs, and Comynalte of the seid Toune, that no person ne persons shall use eny maner of marchaundayse, or marchaundysyng, nor use and exercise eny vytelyng, bying or sellyng, or eny handy craft or ocupacon wythyn the seyd Town or subbarbs of the same, except he or they be free of the guyld of a book containing lists of the latter.—(Ibid., pp. xvii, 29, etc.)

PRESTON ¹.

The Gild Merchant is first mentioned in the ancient Custumal of Preston (thirteenth century). There is an old transcript of this Custumal in Harley MS. 2112, ff. 63–64, headed,—'Liber-tates Gilde Mercatorie eedem cum libertatibus de Nouo Castro subtus limam confirmate per Edwardum [III] Regem.' It begins thus :—

'1. Ita quod habeant gildam mercatoriam cum hansa et aliis consuetudinibus et libertatibus ad gildam illam pertinentibus.

2. Ita quod nullus qui non sit de gilda illa mercandisam aliquam faciat in predicta villa nisi de voluntate burgensium.

3. Si aliquis natiuus alicuius in prefata villa manserit, et terram in ea tenuerit, et fuerit in prefata gilda et hansa et lot et scot cum eisdem burgensibus per unum annum et i. diem, deinceps ne possit repeti a Domino suo, sed in eadem liber permaneat ².'

At a Gild Merchant held at Preston 2 Edw. III, thirteen A.D. 1328.
 ‘pointes and ordinances’ were made, four of which are of particular interest to us :—

‘2. Also the same Maire, balifes and burges, with all the comonalte, be hole assent and consent, have ordered that it shall be leful to the sayd Maior, baliffes and burges, there heyres and successors to sett a Gyld Marchand at every xx. yere end, or ever if they have nede, to conferme chayrters or other distres that longis to oure Francis [i.e. franchise].

5. Also the same Maire, baliffes and burges with all the comonaltie have ordent, be a hole assent and consent, that all manner of burges the which is made burges be court roll and oute of the Gyld Marchand, shall never be maire, ne Bale, ne Serjeand, but onlie the burges the which the name be in the Gyld Marchand last made before ; for the King gyves the freedom to the burges which arne in the Gyld and to none other.

7. Also the same Maire and baliffes and burges, be holle assent

Item quod quilibet Ballivus ville de Preston reddat compotum suum modo prescripto ante electionem Maioris et sub poene forisfacture libertatis sue ad voluntatem Maioris et illorum duodecim qui sibi pro tempore assignati, electi et ordinati erunt. Isti articuli prescripti statuti fuerunt in predicta Curia coram Ricardo de Hoghton et tota communitate ibidem existente, quo [i.e. que] quidem communitas predictis articulis una voce consentunt [i.e. consentiuit].

Hic sunt [i.e. finit] ista Gilda Mercatoria tenta die, loco et anno suprascriptis.—(Abram, Rolls of Burgesses, pp. xviii and 1-7.)¹

At the Gild of 1415 more than 200 'intrinsic' burgesses were enrolled; 52 others were admitted on payment of certain fines; and 22 foreign burgesses are entered on the Roll. Among those admitted by fine were several shoemakers.—(Abram, Memorials, 14.)

Down to the reign of Charles II, the Gild was held before the Mayor, three Stewards and nine Aldermen of the Fraternity. These twelve were the 'principal burgesses,' and in the Corporation they were sometimes called 'benchers' and 'aldermen.'

After this reign till 1835 there were three Stewards and only four PRESTON.
other Aldermen of the Gild.—(Dobson and Harl., 21.)

The following shows that, though the Gild Merchant of Preston continued to exist, it no longer performed its ancient functions to the satisfaction of the burghers. In 1628 a new Company was established in Preston by an order of the town Council. Its preamble sets forth that, although an act of Philip and Mary (1554) had ordained that 'it should not be lawful for anie person inhabitinge in the countrie to come into anie citye, burroughe, markett towne, towne corporate, or within the suburbs or liberties of the same' to 'sett on saile or sell by retaile any manner of woollen cloth, linen cloth, mercery wares, haberdasherye wares, grocery wares, or saltery wares, except it be in open ffaires, linen and woollen cloths made by themselves or ther meniall servants onlie excepted'; and albeit, by another Act of 5 Elizabeth, no one was to set up any craft or mystery, except he had been an apprentice seven years;—yet, notwithstanding, divers handicraftsmen and servants at husbandry leaving their own occupations, seeking not only to live easily but rather idly, had taken upon them within this town of Preston to set up and live by trade of buying and selling of divers wares and merchandise contrary to the law, etc. :—for remedy whereof the Mayor, Bailiffs and Burgesses of Preston, on petition of the most part of the tradesmen of the borough, ordain that from henceforth there shall be within the town 'a Companie or ffraternitie called Wardens and Companie of Drapers, Mercers, Grocers, Salters, Ironmongers, and Haberdashers,' and it shall have power, with consent of the Mayor and Common Council of the town, to make laws for the better ordering of the said trades and for the governing of the said Company. Two Wardens of the Fraternity are to be yearly chosen. No person or persons not inhabiting the said town shall exercise any of the said trades upon pain of forfeiting 10s. per week to the use of the said town and Company; further, that no stranger coming within the town shall set on sale or sell by wholesale or retail any wares or merchandise belonging to any of the trades aforesaid, excepting at fair times, upon pain

PRESTON. of forfeiting the wares so sold or proffered, the half to the use — of the town, the other half to the use of the said Company, except the wares be of their own making.—(Abram, Memorials, 41-42.)¹

The subjoined is from a MS. written in 1741, probably by the Town Clerk of Preston:—‘There is and time out of mind hath been a Guild Merchant held every Twenty Years, in and for this Burrough. The Freemen or Burgesses are of two sorts, viz., the Foreign Burgesses and the Inn-Burgesses. The Foreign Burgesses are admitted at the Guild Merchant and at no other time; and they are exempt from payment of Toll for Goods that they buy in the Burrough for the use of themselves and their family. And this is all the priviledge they have [they cannot vote, hold civic offices, enjoy commons, etc.]. . . . And those admitted betwixt the Guilds, either by the Council or the Mayor, come in at the Guild and pay the usual Fine or Fee of Seven-pence, and are entered with the others, and from that time they all become Guild Burgesses. But until the Guild, those admitted by the Council or by the Mayor are called Inn-Burgesses by Copy of Court Roll.’—(Abram, Rolls of Burgesses, pp. xii-xiii.)

At the Guild Merchant every person made burgess by court roll must appear and be admitted, and every guild brother must be re-admitted.—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, pp. 1687-1688.)²

Nicholas Grimshaw, mayor of Preston, writing in the early part of the present century, having mentioned Coke’s assertion that the bestowal of the Gild Merchant upon a town implies incorporation, continues thus:—‘But the grant of a Gilda Mercatoria does not seem to have invested the Grantees with the local government of the Place, for a Gilda Mercatoria established in a Town, may be distinct from the general Corporation of the Town, though the Gilda Mercatoria and the Corporation may be connected. The officers of the Gilda Mercatoria of the Borough of Preston were quite distinct from those of the Corporation, PRESTON. though they are now selected from that Body. The former consisted of a Mayor, Stewards and Aldermen, and a Seneschal or Clerk of the Guild.'—(Preston Guardian, Sept. 16, 1876.)

The Gild Merchant of Preston 'formed a kind of Court of Session of corporate legislation, held every twenty years [since 1542], at which all the laws for the government of the corporation were passed¹, and at which all the privileges of the burgesses were first claimed and subsequently renewed.' 'The duration of the Guild, which was anciently for a month, was reduced in 1822 to a fortnight, and in 1842 and 1862 [and 1882] it lasted only a week.' 'At the conclusion of the Guild the masters and wardens of all the different companies² attend, as on the first day of the Guild, upon the worshipful the guild-mayor, in open court at the Guild-hall, along with a number of the burgesses. The companies then have their guild-orders sealed and regularly entered in the books.' 'Formerly the purchase of freedom continued from Guild to Guild, and if not renewed at each returning celebration, it was lost. The Municipal Reform Act of 1835 by abolishing any peculiar trade privilege of freemen and opening the government of the town to all rate-payers, divested the Guild of much of its interest.' 'At the last two Guilds freemen renewed their franchise as of old, being incited thereto by considerations of ancient associations, though with the bulk of them the right is of no commercial value. Henceforth the main business of the Guild will be festivity and ceremonials.'—(E. Baines, Co. of Lanc., 1870, ii. 465-466.)

The oath of the Gild, ‘Juramentum Gilde Aule Radingie,’ as used about 14 Henry VI, is still extant. The new brother swore to be true to the king, to the mayor of Reading and the burgesses of the ‘gilde merchant’; to notify the mayor of any person who would disturb the liberties of the Gild; to conceal (‘heelee’) the common counsel of the gild, declaring it to no person out of the ‘seid gildhall,’ except it be a burgess of the same hall.—(Coates, 57–58.) Previous to this reign the head of the Fraternity was called ‘custos gilde,’ the keeper or master of the Gild. In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries the terms ‘keeper of the Gild’ and ‘mayor’ appear to be used interchangeably.—(Ibid., 54, 60; Man, 343, 358.)

The disputes between the Abbot and the Gild continued in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. In 1430 the Abbot seized certain shambles, which, as the burgesses asserted, belonged to them. The latter also claimed that they had the title of a body corporate, a guild-hall and a common seal, that they returned two members to parliament, that they were discharged from all shires and hundred courts and were toll-free throughout England. ‘Lastly they add that the warden and burgesses were seised of the premises in right of their Gild Merchant, by the service of one penny due to the king, before the monastery of Reading

Here are some later admissions to the Gild of persons of distinction :—'Edw. 4th anno 2^{do}. Edwardus Langford, armiger, factus frater gildae aulae.' 'Hen. 8th anno 1^{mo}. Venit Ric. Meredith, serviens stabulae domini Regis Hen. 8th, et dat de fine ad intrandum gildam mercandam, etc.' 'Hen. 8th anno 36th, prima septima Quadragesime. Ad hunc diem venit Joh. Poyntz et benigne disideravit intrare gildam mercandam burgi predicti.' One of the fees generally paid on admission was for a breakfast, 'pro jentaculo.'—(Coates, 56–57.)

The following is extracted from a composition made between the burgesses and the Abbot in 1507 :—'And as touching chepyn gavell, which is a yerely fyne only of all and everie burgess of the seide gylde, which out of tyme of mynde hath been payed yerely to the predecessors of the seide abbot by everie burgess of the seide gylde, that is to saie, every burgess of the same gylde hath payed five pence yerely, and the widowe of everie burgess of the seide gylde two pence farthinge yerely, at the fest of seynt Peter ad vincula, for their occupation of merchandies in the seide towne, for whych fyne of chepyn gavell it is thought by the seide lorde and justices, for a full declaration thereof hereafter, that everie burgess of the seide gylde and widowe aforeseid, for the seide fyne of chepyn gavell, shall and may frely bye and sell all manner of merchandies in their howses and shoppes in the seide towne, and also bye and sell all manner of merchandies and thyngs venable in feyres and markets of the seide town out of their howses and shoppes.'—(Man, 357.)

A record of the reign of Edward VI, Mary or Elizabeth is entitled, 'An account of the several companies belonging to the guild-merchant of Reading with their fines of admission and the rules by which they were governed.' These companies were: the Mercers and Drapers, comprising the 'merciers, drapers, potuaries, haberdashers, chapmen, taylors and cloth-drawers'; the Cutlers and

Bell-founders, including the 'cutlers, bell-founders, brazierers, ^{READING.} pewterers, smiths, pinners, barbers, carpenters, joiners, fletchers, wheelers, basket-makers, coopers, sawyers, bricklayers, card-makers, turners, plumbers, painters and glaziers'; the Tanners and Leather-sellers, containing the tanners, leather-sellers, shoe-makers, curriers, glovers, sadlers, jerkin-makers, bottle-makers, collar-makers and cobblers; the Clothiers and Cloth-workers, including the clothiers, dyers, weavers, shearmen, shuttle-makers and ash-burners; the Victuallers and Innholders, comprising the vintners, innholders, bakers, brewers, butchers, fishmongers, chandlers, malt-makers, wood-mongers, salters and flax-dressers.—(Man, 347-353.)

'Previous to the reign of Elizabeth, the Guild Merchant at Reading was divided into five companies, which were composed of freemen, and, under a variety of grants and charters, had an exclusive right to trade within the borough.'—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, p. 113.)

'Johannes dei gratia, etc. Sciatis nos concessisse burgensibus nostris de Sarisbir' ut habeant gildam mercatorum ad Sarisbir', et quod sint quieti de theloneo, passagio et consuetudine per totam terram nostram, sicut burgenses de Winton' qui sunt de gilda mercatorum sint quieti, et sicut carta Regis Henrici avi patris nostri testatur. In 1306 a composition was entered into between the citizens and the Bishop of Salisbury. Only one clause refers to the Gild:—'Also, from the time of the making of these presents, there shall be, in the city aforesaid, a Gild of Merchants, in which thenceforth are included as subject and devoted to the said lord

SALISBURY. bishop and the bailiff aforesaid all and everyone who before the making of these presents have humbly submitted to the same lord bishop and have on this occasion appeared before the above said Mr. Walter, deputed by the above said lord bishop, as aforesaid, for this purpose, and have promised that they will obey the ordinance of the same lord bishop, whose names are written in a collateral schedule by the same Mr. Walter, as is aforesaid; but from henceforth only they shall participate of the said gild and the liberties obtained who by the said lord bishop, his successors, the mayor of the city for the time being shall happen to be thereunto admitted; but in the future emoluments which will and may happen in the admissions aforesaid, the same shall be divided into four parts, whereof the said lord bishop shall have two, the mayor and bailiff a third equally, and the commonalty aforesaid a fourth. But they who have renounced the liberties aforesaid and before the making of these presents have submitted themselves to the lord, though they do not exercise any publick office in the said city upon this occasion and perhaps are not admitted to the common transactions of these matters, yet they may be in the said gild and enjoy the liberties aforesaid by reason of their submission aforesaid; but the rest who have made the renunciation aforesaid and before the making of these presents have in no wise established themselves with the said lord bishop, shall during the revolt be utterly separated and removed from such transactions, from all bargains, contracts and merchandizes whatsoever and from councils and publick offices in the city itself and from our commonalty.'—(Antiquitates Sarisb., 279.)¹

The list of those who submitted and hence were included in the Gild, comprises 217 names; among them were many hatters, fishermen, drapers, dyers, fullers, etc.—(Hoare, Modern Wilts., vi. 78.)

The ancient Gild Rolls of Shrewsbury consist of lists of gilds-men. The first begins thus:—'Sanctus Spiritus assit nobis.

 'viii.d. primo.'—'Illi qui primo intraverunt Gildam.' Nine names follow. 'De forinsecis qui intraverunt Gildam et de fine eorum.' Fifty-six names, with payments varying from half a mark to 10s. 'Isti intrauerunt ad ultimam assisam primo.'
 Fifty-nine names. On this Roll are endorsed upwards of three hundred other names.

The second Roll begins thus:—'Memorandum de Gilda mer- A.D. 1209.

Third Roll.—'Memorandum de Forinsecis et aliis in gilda ultima intratis ad viii. assisam in crastino Sancte trinitatis anno A.D. 1230. Regni Regis henrici filii Regis Johannis xiii^o.' One hundred and sixty-four names.

Fourth Roll.—'Rotulus de Ghylda mercatoria in burgo Salop' ad novam assisam; primus dies sessionis fuit dies martis prox' A.D. 1239. post festum Sancti Dionisii anno regni regis henrici xxiii.' Sixty-eight names.

Fifth Roll.—'Rotulus de forinsecis de Gylde mercantoria ad assisam novam prime diei mercurii prox' post festum Sancti Barnabe apostoli Anno regni regis Henrici filii Regis Johannis tricesimo sexto.' Two hundred and thirty-four names; a few females occur in this and some of the former Rolls.

Sixth Roll.—'Rotulus de illis qui quatuor denarios sunt pacaturi. Nomina Theynesmen.' Twelve names, apparently those of the principal people in the town. Over most of them are set different numbers, as v^o, vii^o, iiii^{to}, etc. Then follows the heading 'Rotulus de Ghylda mercatoria in burgo Salop' ad novam assisam; primus dies sessionis fuit dies mercurii prox' post festum Sancti Barnabe apostoli anno regni regis henrici filii Johannis xxxvi.' Three hundred and sixty-eight names, after most of which there is a number I, II, III, etc.

While we have no positive information concerning the circumstances under which these laws were passed, their careful perusal must lead to the conclusion that they were not the work of a single deliberative assembly, but were doubtless made from time to time, as need required. With the meagre data that we possess we cannot separate the document into its component parts and assign to each the date of its inception. But we may conclude that the earliest ordinances (at least §§ 1-11) belong to a time when the Gild was a strictly private fraternity without general civic functions, while the later ones were made after the Gild had become the dominant burghal authority (probably in the fourteenth century). Though the gradual extension of its powers and sphere of action may thus be followed, the ordinances bear manifest traces of the old dual system of municipal government, the commerce of the town being regulated by the alderman, steward and ‘eskevins’ of the Gild, and municipal matters in general, especially judicial business, by the bailiffs and twelve jurats.

‘The Ordinances,’ says Smirke, ‘curiously exemplify the intimate connection between the constitution of a gild-merchant and that of a municipal corporation. They were clearly not identical, but the one may sometimes be shown to have originated in the other, as Madox has long ago observed. The gilds in the larger cities were usually distinct incorporations, but more or less

SOUTHAMPTON. associated with the general corporation, as is still conspicuously the case in the city of London. At Southampton, although the "Gilde marchaunt," the "Fraunchise," and the "Ville" are distinguished (see Art. 30, 44, 45, 46, 53, 77), it is not easy to say to which of these any Ordinance belongs. I have no doubt, however, that they had become in course of time so amalgamated as to be the subject of common local regulation.'—(Archaeol. Journal, xvi. p. 352.)

'A nostre Seignour & a son Conseil monstrent les Marchautes de Wyncestre, & de Salisbury, & les autres Marchaunz de la terre nostre Seignour le Roi, veignantz a les partiez de Suthampton, qi come touz les Marchauns du Roialme d'Engleterre de tut temps ount usee de venir & achatre chescun manere de Marchaundises deinz la Fraunchise de la diste Ville de Suhampton, des estraunges & des privees, auxi bien en l'ewe come en terre, & auxi en Neefs illoeqes appliauntz, ou dehors, fesauntz Custumes au nostre Seignour le Roi ceux qi Custume devient doner, solom ceo qe d'auncien temps ad este usee ; la veignent les Burgeis de mesme la Ville, & ne voillent soeffrer nul Marchaunt estraunge ne privee nul manere Marchaundie achatier denz l'ewe de mesme la Fraunchise, mes par lour maines demesnes, en charisement des Marchaundies avaunt ditz, al damage des Marchauns & de la Comminalte de people. Dont prien[t] remedie.

SOUTHAMPTON. was prominent, and so continued for a couple of centuries or more¹. The entries in the "Burgess Book" of 1496 record admissions "into the gilde" or into "the libertie of the gilde." One or other of these forms occurs without a variation till the admission of Bishop Horne in 1562, whose name is the last thus entered. After this there is a marked change in the style. The next and most of the subsequent admissions are "to be one of the burgesses," or, in the latest times till 1835, "admitted and sworn a burgess." Still in 1597 we find an admission "to be one of the burgesses and guilde"; and the same or similar form of "guild and burgess" occurs not unfrequently until 1704; after which the name does not appear in documents, and only remains in the word guildhall.—(Davies, Southampton, 138.)

SWANSEA.

The charter of Wm. de Braose (1305) contains this clause:—

The Lord Protector in his charter to Swansea, A.D. 1655, after incorporating the Mayor, Aldermen and Burgesses, proceeds thus:—And, further, they 'shall and may forever hereafter have and enjoy one ffree Guild of Merchants within the said Towne of Swansey. And that the Maior and Comon-Councell of the said Towne for the time being or the greater part of them (whereof the Mayor of the said Towne for the time being Wee will to be alwaies one) shall have full power and authority by theis Presents to call and admitt unto the same Free Guild and Burgeshipp of the said Towne such and soe many able and discreete persons as to them shall seeme fitt, and uppon any iust and lawful grounds and causes to Disfranchise them or any of them. . . . Fifteen ancient Rolls of the Gild Merchant of Totnes are still preserved in the archives of that borough (Numbers 15–29 of the town records). The oldest Roll (No. 15), extending from 1260 into the reign of Edward I, is endorsed by a later hand, 'A Rolle of the free mens names,' etc.¹ It contains a list of more than 300 members, written in two columns. The following extracts will illustrate its contents :—

'Rotulus Gylde mercatorum Totton' Tempore Ricardi filii Ade et Ricardi de Porta anno domini MCC sexagessimo. Hec scripta sunt per manus Bartholomei capellani et clerici huius fraternitatis qui est huius Libertatis iuratus, cuius sunt subsequentes :—

² For other extracts from this Roll, translated into English, see Rep. MSS. Com. 1872, pp. 342-343, and Devon. Assoc., xii. 183-186.

No. 16 is endorsed, 'Compot[us] concernent[ium] Gild' mer- TOTNES.
cator' temp' E. primi, E. ii. et E. iii.' Besides the accounts, which — are too roughly jotted down to be very intelligible, it contains the agreement with the Abbot of Buckfastleigh made in the year 20 Henry III¹.

No. 20 begins thus:—'Rotulus communitatis Totton' tangens Totton'.
nomina intrantium in Gildam mercatorum Totton' anno regni regis Edwardi [II] filii Regis Edwardi tercio decimo, tempore Johannis de Essa et Galfridi de Grafton.' Several other Rolls are similarly headed².

No. 21 begins with the words:—'Die martis in festo sancti Kalixti pape anno Regni Edwardi [II] filii Regis Edwardi xiiii^o; A.D. 1320.
Johannes de Buddeston' et Robertus Lauranz receperunt cus-todiam officii Senescalli Gylde mercatorum Totton'.

The entries in Rolls 16–26 are quite similar to those in Roll 15, from which extracts have been already given. The parties named enter the Gild and generally produce pledges to observe the laws. They frequently pay both a 'fordele' and a fine, but the former term gradually disappears. Admissions to the Gild were by purchase, gift or inheritance.

Subjoined is an abstract of No. 27, which, being a record of the proceedings at a Gild court, is particularly interesting:—

Anthony Leaver was appointed master.' In 1703 this ordinance was made void on the ground that it was prejudicial to the common weal and good government 'of us the said mayor, burgesses and commonalty.' There was, however, a reservation, whereby the income to be derived from fines on being made free, etc. was maintained.—(Hedges, ii. 237.)

In 1440 various laws were made 'for the gode rule and governaunce of the towne of Walsall':—

'I.—First, we ordeyne and stablysshe all thies articles hereafter folowyng, that is to say, after eny chosyng of eny Masters of the Gylde, that these articles shalbe rehersed in the counsell chamber before them which be so chosen for the tyme beyng, to the entent that they shall not fayle to kepe and folowe the goode rule and governaunce which be conteyned in the seyde ordynance, for the welth and profyt of the seyde Gylde, and in eschuyng of such grete mysorder and inconvenyence as here of late hath fortunyd and happenyd. The following brief abstract of No. 31 will illustrate the general form of these later Rolls:—

Admissions into the Gild, etc., etc.]' Sewed to this membrane is a narrower and longer one entitled, 'Rotulus libere Assise tempore Willielmi Empyngham Maioris anno regni regis Henrici quarti septimo.' It contains about 125 names, with sums varying from ob. to iv. d. opposite the same.

Among other ordinances made at the Mayor's Court, 28 Henry VI, it is enacted that no one shall carry the mace before the Mayor, unless he is a member of the Gild Merchant.

Some of the latest entries concerning the Gild are to be found in No. 45 ('Curia legalis Maioris,' 10 Edward IV), where several admissions into the Fraternity are recorded, for example, 'ad hanc curiam Henricus M. ingressus est Gildam mercatorum,' etc.

The term Gild Merchant continued to be used in the oath for burgesses of Totnes down to 1835:—

'You shall true liegeman be and true faith bear to our Sovereign . . . Heirs and lawful Successors, Kings or Queens of this Realm, and also shall be obedient to Mr. Mayor of this Town and his successors, in as much as you are accepted and taken into the Fraternity and Brotherhood of the Freedom and Gild Merchant of this Town. You shall come at all times at Mr. Mayor's commandment and calling (except you have great and urgent business to the contrary), and him shall assist and aid to your powers.  i. 270.)

There are various Rolls of the time of Henry III and Edward I which seem to have belonged to the Gild, though the latter is not mentioned. The oldest is of the year 1227 and contains a list, under companies representing trades, of persons contributing to a certain assessment. The title of this Roll is,— 'Rotulus pactionariorum in Walengford', anno regni Regis Henrici, filii Regis Johannis xim^o, Adrea filio Godwini et Waltero M., Prepositis.' The payments vary from 2*d.* to 4*s.* The first 29 names have no trade set against them as a class. Then follow 34 'Sutores'; 17 'Wantiers' (Glovers); 44 'Mercenarii' (Mercers); 7 'Ferrones'; 12 'Fabri'; 10 Carpenters, including

WALLINGFORD. Wheelers and Coopers; 4 Weavers; 5 Fullers; and 17 Bakers¹.

— On the reverse of the Roll appear the names of the Foreigners ('Forenses'), many, to judge from their names, being inhabitants of adjoining villages, such as Craumerse, Dorchester, etc. The Roll closes with 12 'Foeminae forenses.' The other Rolls are of a similar character. That of 14 John gives, after the 'forenses,' a list of those in Craumerse paying contributions, which were on a smaller scale than those of persons from a greater distance. This Roll also enumerates 12 'Carnifices' and 5 'Bolteres' (probably Millers). In some of the later Rolls the contributors from neighbouring towns are called 'Foreign Covenanters,' 'Conventionarii forinceci.'—(Rep. MS. Com. 1877, pp. 576-579.)

There are brief references to the Gild in many deeds of the 13th and 14th centuries. In the year 42 Henry III, Alexander Dublet, Mayor of Wallingford, and the Gildans of the town lend to Nicholas de Stalles 60s. (Ibid., 589.) In a parchment deed of about the same date Richard the Cook, son of Andrew the Cook, grants to the Alderman and Gildans of the Gild of the town 28*d.* of yearly rent from a certain messuage, for 25*s.* prepaid. There are two other deeds very similar to this, temp. Edward I. (Ibid., 585, 588.) In the year 18 Edward I, Bartholomew de Shireburne grants to Thomas Hitone of Chauseye, Mayor of Wallingford, Wm. de la Wike, Ralph Boueye, John Orfeure, Aldermen, and the Gildans of the burgh a certain tenement for 2 marks. (Ibid., 590.) Temp. Edward I, Thomas Saleman of Wallingford bestows upon the Alderman and Gildans of the town 6*d.* of yearly rent, they having granted him admission to the freedom ('ingressum libertatis') of Wallingford. There are two more deeds similar to this of about the same date. (Ibid., 587.) In the same reign John de Pulham, Taverner, gives John de Luches, Mayor, and the community of Wallingford, for having freedom of the Gild for life, 6*d.* of yearly rent. (Ibid., 588.) In the year 4 Edward II, William, son of Ernald Boneface of Wallingford, transfers to the community of the said burgh 6*d.* of yearly rent admitted the said William as a burgess and brother ('confratrem'), it being in the time of John Maryot, Mayor, Osbert de Notele, Simon de Heyworth and Ralph le Taverner, Aldermen. (Ibid.,

During the reign of Henry IV, besides the Burghmote, the Portmote, the Piepowder and View of Frankpledge, there was held a Court of the Aldermen of the Gild, who granted the freedom of the borough on receiving small annual sums as the purchase money for the privilege.—(Hedges, ii. 36.)

borough whereby it was empowered to establish a society, gild, or fraternity, of one master and two wardens of any art, mystery, or occupation. '20 Sept., 1667. At a court held this day, after reciting that the king had conferred on the borough a charter, granting large privileges, and among them the privilege of establishing a society, gild, or fraternity, of one master and two wardens, the mayor, burgesses and commonalty, at the request of divers tradesmen and for the advancement of trade within the borough, did create and establish the said gild accordingly, to be one body corporate, politique and corporate, with succession for ever.' The mayor for the time being was empowered to amove and depose the master and wardens on any lawful occasion.—(Hedges, ii. 234–235.)

Three months afterwards, in order to prevent divers foreigners from defrauding the ancient liberties and customs of the town by putting to sale their wares by subtle means, it was ordained that no person, not being a freeman, shall sell any wares by retail within the borough or use any trade or handicraft therein, under a penalty of 20s. for every offence. In 1681 fines from 40s. to £15 were imposed upon various persons 'for trading, not being a freeman.'—(Hedges, ii. 235–236.)

New ordinances were made against any infringement of the trade monopoly, but, these proving ineffectual, the Gild was revived under the letters patent of Charles II. 'At a common council held on the 20th of Sept., 1701, the mayor, burgesses

WALSALL 252. Anthony Lever was appointed master. In 1703 this ordinance was made void on the ground that it was prejudicial to the common weal and good government 'of us the said mayor, burgesses and commonalty.' There was, however, a reservation, whereby the income to be derived from fines on being made free, etc. was maintained.—(Hedges, ii. 237.)

In 1440 various laws were made 'for the gode rule and governaunce of the towne of Walsall':—

A charter of 7 James I contains the following :—The said town shall be a free borough corporate by itself. . . . The mayor shall be a justice of the peace. . . . The town to have a Gild of merchants and other gilds or fraternities within the borough; and that no one who may not be of the Gild shall sell within the said borough unless at the pleasure of the mayor, bailiffs, free burgesses and commonalty of the same, and that they may be able to divide themselves into different gilds or fraternities according to their several arts and mysteries [a weekly court, fairs and markets.] And that there may be a Gild of the merchants of the staple within the borough consisting of one mayor, two constables WEXFORD.

WINCHESTER. Brute, 99 years before the first building of Rome, has the following inscription:—‘The Guild of Merchants here tempore king Ethelwald, anno 96¹, first confederate.’—(Milner, Winch., ii. 249–250.)

Milner says: ‘It was in the latter end of this reign, viz. in the year 856, that, its trade and commerce flourishing exceedingly, our principal citizens formed themselves, under the royal protection, into a society, called a guild, being the first association of this nature, by the space of a whole century, recorded in history. Thus early were the foundations laid of this primitive corporation.’—(Hist. of Winch., i. 121.) Milner refers to Trussel’s MS. as his authority for the above, but the latter distinctly affirms (fol. 73), ‘the origen of [this] corporacon I could neuer yet haue the happynes to find².’ And yet Milner’s unfounded statement has been reiterated by many writers; and various pregnant inferences as to the prevalence of the Gild Merchant in England before the Norman Conquest, have been based upon it³. This, for example, is Thompson’s sole source for the assertion that ‘in England in most of the ancient boroughs, Merchant Guilds were established in the Saxon period.’—(Munic. Hist., 13.)

‘Henricus [II] rex Angliae, dux Normanniae et Aquitaniae, comes Andegaviae, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, vicecomitibus, et omnibus fidelibus suis Francis et Anglis, et Ministris totius Angliae et omnium portuum maris salutem. Precipio quod cives mei Winton’ de gilda mercatorum cum omnibus rebus suis sint quieti de omni thelonio, passagio et consuetudine. WINCHESTER. was confirmed by Henry III, Edward I and Edward II.—(Fœdera, i. 50–51; Woodward, Hampshire, i. 271–272.)

In the reign of Edward I (circa 1275), a dispute arose between the Bishop of Winchester and the citizens of that town, the latter claiming a certain street which the former had appropriated to himself. In the ‘veredictum xii. juratorum’ we find the following:—‘Et quia in illa libertate sic appropriata nichil solvunt, eo quod ballivi Winton’ non habent ingressum in illam libertatem ad distractiones faciendas, sicut prius facere consueverunt, fere omnes operarii burellorum et chalonum a civitate se subtrahunt et ibi manent, et omnes alii tenentes domini episcopi adeo liberi sunt sicut alii de gilda mercatoria, ad emendum et vendendum omnimodas mercandisas, ad magnum damnum civitatis predicte,’ etc.—(Archæol. Journal, vii. 374, 383.)

‘The Old Usages of Winchester’¹ are very valuable for the study of the crafts and other municipal institutions. In this place we can give only such brief extracts as throw light upon the history of the Gild Merchant:—‘Also, no man ne may bygge leper grene ne skyn grene in þe towun, but ȝif he be of fraunchyse, vppeyne to nyme þat good to þe ferme of þe town. And þulke þath beth in fraunchyse, by whom hii hem mowe bygge, ne shulle hem nowt wip-ouþe þe fraunchyse lede.

A.D. 1265. In the year 49 Henry III the citizens of Winchester and the burgesses of Southampton entered into a composition :—'quod de cetero nec apud Wynton' de hominibus de libertate Suthampton', nec apud Suthampton' de hominibus de Gylda mercatoria Wynton', aliqua consuetudo exigatur, nisi solomodo tronagium siue pesagium, cum acciderit.'—(Black Book of Winch.,³ 21 b.)

² This version was unknown to the editor of 'English Gilds' ('Engl. Gilds,' p. xlvi). His interpretation of 'gylde chaffare' as a 'Gild-sale' is manifestly erroneous. It was simply a peculiar mode of raising money by an assessment of the merchants ('gadere þat ryzte of chepmen'). While the business was being transacted, they drank and feasted. Hence the peculiar expression in the text 'to drink the gild merchant.' A similar phrase was used in Germany : 'Die kaufleute und Gewandschneider tranken die Gilde,' 'Celebrata fuit gulda et perfortiter bibita,'—L. Goetze, Gesch. der Stadt Stendal, Stendal 1873, p. 105.

The following was the oath for those entering the Gild Merchant WINCHESTER. of Winchester, temp. Henry IV:—‘Juramentum pro hominibus in-

The ‘Black Book’ (fol. 42 b) contains a later copy² of this oath with the heading, ‘The othe to swere men to be ffre, knelyng on the bailiffs of Winchester, as well for themselves as for the Gild Merchant of Winchester (‘tam pro se quam pro Ciuitate Gylde officers of the sheriffs of London had distrained the freemen of the said Gild (‘liberos homines de Gylde predicta’) for the custom of two shillings on each cart-load of goods bought in London, contrary to the composition made between the mayor, aldermen and commonalty of London and the mayor and com-the corporation of Winchester, from Richard II to 5 Edward VI. Wherever the words ‘gilda mercatoria’ occur, a mark (generally ) on the margin of the page calls attention to them. These marks have evidently been made by a later hand, perhaps by a town officer searching for evidence in some such case concerning the Gild as we shall speak of below (Mayor of Winton versus Wilks).

'In all Humbleness beseech your most Excellent Majestie The Mayor, Bayliffes and Comonaltie of your Majesties antient City of Winchester in the County of Southampton, That Whereas the said City is one of the most antient and formerly the Chiefest for keeping Parliaments, Councells, Coronations, Nuptialls and Sepultures of your Noble Progenitors, And was first built by Ludor Rouse Hudibrasse, Son of Liel, the son of Brute Greenchild, the Second Son of Ebranke, the Great Grand Child of the first Brute, 892 yeares before the birth of Christ, in the age of the world 2995; 99 yeares before the building of Roome. And it was first invironed with Stone Walls by Mulmusius Dumwald Anno Mundi 3528. And there was a Guild of Merchants made and Established by King Ethellwald, the first Confederate, Which Guild of Merchants had diverse Priviledges, Vsages and Customes. And that the said Guild of Merchants and many of their Vsages and Customes have bin and now are continued within the same City, and for preservation of such Vsages and Customes many of them were Entred amongst the Records of and now remaining in the Tower of London and also entred and Inrolled amongst the Antient Records of the said City of Winchester. And that Whereas King Henry the first, King Richard the first and King Edward the fourth and severall other Kings and Queens of this Realm by several letters Patent or Charters under the Great Seale of England did grant divers Priviledges to the Citizens of the said City, free of the said Guild of Merchants, and Confirme other Priviledges, vndoeing of the freemen of the said Guild of Merchants and other Inhabitants there and decay of the same Citty.

For redress whereof may it please your Most excellent Majesty, That it may be enacted by your Majesty, The Lords Spirituall and Temporall and the Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the Authority of the same, and be it enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the antient Custome and vsage before mencioned concerning the qualification of persons to vse and exercise any Art, Trade, Mistery or manual occupation within the WINCHESTER. said Citty of Winchester and alsoe soe much of the said Charter as doth concern the premises shall from henceforth stand and be good, effectuall and sufficient in the Law to all intents and purposes according to the true meaning of the same Charter, and that the same vsage and Custome and all By Laws already made and hereafter to be made concerning ye said Custome by the said Mayor, Bayliffes and Comonalty and their Successors, freemen of the said Guild of Merchants, be ratified and confirmed by this present Parliament.

Provided alwayes That it shall and may be lawfull to and for any person or persons to buy or sell in the time of faires there and also to buy or sell provisions in the Marketts there, soe as such provisions be not bought or sold contrary to any Statute made against florestallers, Regrators and Ingrossers.'—(Addit. Charter, Mus. Brit., 15702.)

A.D. 1705. Easter Term 4 Annae Reginae. Mayor of Winton versus Wilks. 'In an action upon the case the plaintiff declares, "quod cum civitas Winton est et a tempore, etc. fuit antiqua civitas, et in eadem civitate habetur et a tempore, etc. habebatur consuetudo, quod non liceat alicui personae praeter homines liberos de gilda mercatoria civitatis illius ad utendum vel excercendum publice infra eandem civitatem aliquod misterium, artem sive manualement occupationem in dicta civitate, tota tempore supradicta usitatam, nisi hujusmodi persona per spatium septem annorum prius educatus fuisset tanquam apprenticius in eadem civitate ad vel in hujusmodi misterio, arte sive occupatione, aut ad inde aliter fuit legitimo modo autorizatus secundum morem civitatis illius, etc." Yet the defendant bringing him within the custom, ad damnum of the plaintiff, etc., upon not guilty pleaded there was a verdict for the plaintiff, and the court was moved in arrest of judgment.'

In behalf of the defendant, Mr. Raymond 'urged that the guild of merchants ought to have brought the action and not the mayor, etc. of Winchester; for the persons, whose franchises are broke and who are thereby grieved ought to bring the action. And accordingly in 1 Lev. 262 the action is brought by a free-man; and in 3 Cro. 803 by the corporation, in whom the franchise is laid to be. But here the franchise is laid in the guild, WINCHESTER. and therefore the guild ought to bring the action and not the mayor, etc., for it is no franchise of the city, nor consequently does an infringement intitle them to an action.'

And as to the second objection, that the guild of merchants ought to have brought this action, the plaintiff's counsel said, 'that being free of the guild of merchants was but one of the qualifications which would intitle a man to set up a trade ; but if he had either served seven years apprenticeship, or were free by redemption, he might set up a trade. And therefore it was not a damage to the guild of merchants only, but was as much a damage to every freeman ; and consequently, if the guild of merchants might bring an action, every freeman might bring an action. He said the mayor and corporation must bring the action for another reason, viz., that a corporation by letters patent, as the guild of merchants was, could not maintain this action, but only a corporation by prescription, such as the city was.'

Chief Justice Holt said, 'that the words gilda mercatoria signify a corporation, and that where the king in ancient times granted to the inhabitants of a ville or borough to have gildam mercatoriam, they were by that incorporated, 10 Co. 30 a, but what it signifies here in this declaration nobody knows ; for the plaintiff does not shew what it is, but only says that it is not lawful for any person to exercise a trade that is not free of the gilda mercatoria.'

Justice Powell said, 'that a custom to exclude people from exercising a trade, was a strange custom ; but if that were the point now to be determined, he would consider well of it, because the giving judgment to set aside such a custom, would have a very great influence ; because such a custom is claimed in most corporations by prescription ; but that there would be no need to come to that in this case, for that this declaration was naught : first, for not shewing that there is such a franchise in the corporation ; for as this declaration is, the corporation would maintain an action for breach of their franchise, without shewing they have any : for the franchise is laid by this declaration in the gilda mercatoria, and we cannot take notice that the gilda mercatoria and

WINCHESTER. the city are all one, though they may be so; and upon the evidence it seemed probable they were so.'

Judgment was entered 'quod querentes nil capiant,' etc., on the exceptions to the declaration.—(Lord Raymond, Reports, Lond. 1790, pp. 1129–1135.)

According to another Report, Holt said, 'this declaration is naught. The action ought to be brought by the gilda mercatoria; how is the city prejudiced? Anciently the king's grant to have gildam mercatoriam made the whole town to have a corporation. But non constat to us whether the Guild here be the whole town, or part of the town, or what part of the town, nor by what right there is any gilda mercatoria in this place.'—(Salkeld, Reports, i. 203.)

In 1835 the freemen of Winchester were still 'admitted and sworn free and freemen of the guild of merchants.'—(Munic. Corp. Com. 1835, p. 898.)

WINDSOR.

A.D. 1277. The Gild Merchant was granted to the burgesses of Windsor by a charter of 5 Edward I. In an inquisition of 1439 the Gild is again enumerated among the liberties of the town.—(Tighe and Davis, Windsor, i. 104, 305.)¹

A.D. 1466. In the year 6 Edward IV a mayor, two bailiffs, two bridge-keepers and two keepers of the Holy Trinity occur. 'The last-mentioned officers were trustees of a fund for the celebration of masses and obits for the souls of the brethren of the Guild of the Holy Trinity, as the corporation of Windsor was sometimes described.'—(Ibid., i. 321.)²

¹ The charter of 5 Edward I was confirmed by grants of 9 Edward II, 2 Edward III, 17 Henry VI, 2 Edward IV, 15 Henry VII, 6 Henry VIII and 3 Edward VI,—Tighe and Davis, i. 127, 135, 307, 360, 420, 472, 581.

In the year 14 Edward IV were made, decreed and ordained WINDSOR.

The Statutes for the Order and Regiment to be hadde, used, and contynued in the Corporacion or Fraternitie of the Guylde hall in New Wyndesor.' Among them was the following :—'Item, yt is established and agreed, That there shal be 28 or 30, at the most, of the substauncyelst and wysest men of the same Towne to be of one Fraternitie of the Guildehall; and of the 28 or 30 brethern, 13 of them shall be benchers and sitt upon the Benche, and shalbe called Burgenses, and of the same Burgenses 7 of them shal be called Aldermen, yf soe many have borne the office and charge of the Mayor within the said Towne of Wyndesor.'—(Tighe and Davis, i. 400–401.)

There is a rental of the Trinity Brethren, or Corporation of Windsor, of the year 1500, £8 18s. being the aggregate of the rents. It ends thus :—'Memorandum that the Masters of the Guild make up their yeares Accompte the Monday after All Soules day, ending at Michaelmas before, and then New Masters were chosen for the yeare following.' The above was taken out of a 'Booke of the Accounts of the Guild, the Chamberlaynes, etc.'—(Ibid., i. 450.)

In the year 32 Henry VIII an order was made in the Gildhall A.D. 1541. by the mayor, bailiffs and brethren concerning the lands of the Gild, i.e. the 'lands or Tenements apperteyning or belonging to the Gwyld hawle of New Wyndesor, or to the Fraternity or bretherhode of the blessyd Trinitie.'—(Ibid., i. 520.)

Every person admitted into the town corporation in the time of Elizabeth swore to aid the mayor, to keep the 'Cowncell of the Guildhall,' to assist and help 'in all Causes that may sownde to the Comon weale and profitt of the said Guild,' and to maintain the ordinances of the town.—(Ibid., i. 647.)

WYCOMBE.

A.D. 1558. A grant of 5-6 Philip and Mary asserts that time out of mind the town of Wycombe had been an incorporated free borough, and that it had used and still used two fairs, a weekly market and a Gild Merchant :—'ac gilda mercatoria cum aula et aliis consuetudinibus et libertatibus ad huiusmodi gildam pertinentibus. The Gild Merchant of Wycombe seems to have also borne the name of the Gild of St. Mary.—(Parker, 37.)

In 1316 it was ordered by the Mayor and Commons, that all WYCOMBE.
weavers working within the liberties shall give only 12*d.* yearly to the 'Gildani' for every loom, and shall henceforth be free in all things concerning the Gild of merchants, except stallages. 'The "Gildani" are frequently named with the Mayor and Bailiffs about this date; it was their duty, probably, to regulate the gilds, or trades, of which the Merchants' gild seems to have been the chief.' There were two 'Gildani.'—(Rep. MSS. Com. 1876, p. 556; Parker, 36-37, 44.)

'At this date (20 Edw. III) meetings before the Mayor, Bailiffs A.D. 1346. and commons were known as "Gilds".'—(Rep. MSS. Com. 1876, p. 556.)

40 Edward III.—It was ordained that every child of a burghess, A.D. 1366. who at the time appears to be the oldest, after the decease of his father, on claiming the freedom, shall have the same on paying 10½*d.*, without any further payment,—namely, to the mayor 1*d.*, to the clerk ½*d.*, to the under-bailiff ½*d.*, to the 'gildans' ('gildanis') 8*d.*, and to the master of St. John's ½*d.*, etc.—(Ibid. pp. 556-557.)

The 'Gyldans,' or 'Yeldens,' are again mentioned in the reigns of Henry VII and James I.—(Ibid., 557; Parker, 53.)

YARMOUTH, GREAT.

The burgesses of Great Yarmouth received a grant of the Gild by a charter of 9 John, which was confirmed by several of his A.D. 1208. successors.—(Rot. Chart., 175; Petyt MS., ii. 1-18.) It was afterwards known as the Great Gild of the Holy Trinity.—(Man-ship, Hist of Yarm., 243; Swinden, Yarm., 812.)

In the year 33 Henry VIII, it was agreed at an assembly held A.D. 1541. at the common hall, that every one of the four and twenty and eight and forty should pay yearly toward the finding of the Trinity mass-priest at the gild-day 4*d.*—(Swinden, 54.)

'In this hall [i.e. Gild-hall] in times past (viz., within my remembrance), was yearly holden on Trinity Sunday, a solemn feast for the whole brotherhood and fellowship of the society called the Blessed Trinity, which by our first charter of King John, anno

YARMOUTH,

1207, was granted unto us, by the name of the Merchants' Guild; whereunto every one of the Common Council, at his first admission and oath taken, doth still acknowledge himself a brother of that company. Which feast was, for the most part, yearly holden, at the cost of four of that brotherhood successively, according to the course of their incoming maintained; over which the senior bailiff for the year precedent was, and is, nominated Alderman. The hall itself being at that time richly hanged and adorned with cloth of Arras Tapestry, and other costly furniture; not sparing any dainty fare which might be had for money. At which feast all private quarrels and emulations were heard and ended, to the glory of God and mutual love amongst neighbours. . . . Whereby thus much may be inferred; that if laudable and praiseworthy is the bond of amity and friendship among mere natural men, then how much more especially is that which is amongst Christians, who be tied by the strongest bond of faith and religion; but above all amongst those Christians which be of one fraternity, bound and linked together by solemn oath for performance, as those be that are chosen into the society of [the] Common Council at Yarmouth. . . . Therefore, if any grudge of a private quarrel should be amongst them, the same will incense and provoke enmity, to the prejudice of the commonwealth where they govern; for most certain it is where anger beareth sway, there can be nothing rightly and considerately advised; therefore, the better to prevent all such unkindnesses, was this feast held.'—(Manship, Hist., 52-54.)¹

A.D. 1504. 'Feb. 28, anno Eliz. 6. Ordered that the merchants' dinner, or feast of late called the Trinity Brotherhood, shall be erected and heynd this present year to come, and so forth to continue until farther orders be taken. The names of those persons appointed for the order of the same feast and for estimating thereof, viz., Mr. Bailiffs Wm. Garton, Anthony Loveday, Ralph Woolhouse.'

In 1556, the corporation resolved that the money owing to the Trinity Gild be taken to the use of the town wall, and in 1562, the mace appertaining to the Trinity Gild was given to the water bailiff, he paying two shillings yearly to the church. In 1574, it was resolved that the money heretofore usually paid to the alderman of the Trinity Gild by the members of the corporate body, on being sworn in, should thenceforth be paid to the chamberlains.—(Manship, 245.)

To this and the other Andover Gild Rolls from which I give extracts below, the following general remarks will apply:—They are all parchments. Both sides are written upon, and all are well preserved, unless otherwise stated in the foot-notes. In the entries ‘de placito transgressionis,’ the nature of the offence is rarely recorded. All the Gild records, except the Maneloquium books, are catalogued in the Andover archives as No. 31, ‘A large number of miscellaneous documents and papers.’

¹ There is an older roll at Andover similar to this, headed ‘Rotulus fforwardmannorum de Domo Inferiori intitulus, Anno Regni Regis Edwardi [III] filii Regis Edwardi Secundo.’ It measures 18 by 9½ inches, and is in a somewhat ragged condition. This membrane, like that of 12 Edw. III, contains forty-two groups of four names each, preceded by ‘ffor.’ Some of these groups have, in addition, one or more names through which a line has been drawn, or opposite which ‘vacat’ is written. Five of the groups are entirely cancelled. Many of the groups in this roll are identical with those of 12 Edw. III. In others the only change is the succession of a son to a father; or a husband occupies the place formerly held by his wife. The cancelled groups, spoken of above, do not appear in the roll of 12 Edw. III; and the last six groups of the latter are not in the former.

On Friday next after the festival of St. Gregory, 22 Edward III, A.D. 1348.
there was one admission to the Gild.

I have carefully compared these ancient Gild Rolls with contemporary records of the Andover Hundred Court. The latter was held weekly on Monday. The two headings, 'Curia tenta die Lune,' etc. and 'Hundredum tentum die Lune,' etc., are used alternately. In some rolls 'Hundredum forinsecum' is substituted for 'Curia,' and 'Hundredum intrinsecum' for 'Hun-dredum.' The entries refer for the most part to pleas concerning debt, land, transgressions, bloodshed, trespass, battery, theft, breaking the assize ('pro assisa fracta'), 'pro tollonio asportato,' 'pro hutesio levato,' etc. The only officers mentioned are the Bailiffs. The Gild is never referred to. The decennaries are sometimes alluded to ; and there are a few admissions into aldermanries, for example:—'Stephanus pistor intrat in Aldremanriam Johannis le Knyst per plegium Thome Cabbel et Julie, Relicte W. Snow' (33 Edw. I). The following extract from one of the Hundred Rolls will exemplify their general form and contents :—

Liber A* of the Maneloquium Books¹ contains records of the Gild from 3 Henry V to 5 Henry VII. Most of the entries are similar to the following :—

'Morwespeche ibidem tenta die dominica proxima ante festum Andeuere. Sancti Michaelis Archangeli anno regni regis Henrici VI xxv^{to}. A.D. 1446.

Electi ad officium Balliuorum per xxiiii. fforwardinos	{	Thomas Latenere, Walterus James, Johannes Basyngge, Robertus Penyton'.

Unde electi per Senechallos { Joh. Basyngge
Rob. Penyton' } et jurati sunt.

ANDOVER. — Ad istam venit Johannes Champyon et petit societatem Gildanorum, et concessa est ei, Soluendo communitati ville predicte xx.s., videlicet, ad festa Pasche, Sancti Johannis Baptiste et Sancti Michaelis proximo sequentibus post datam presentem. Plegii, Ricardus Lokett et Thomas Latenere.'

According to the entries in this book, the meetings were generally held once a year—after 1 Henry VI, usually on Sunday before Michaelmas. From 33 Henry VI 'Maneloquium' supersedes the English term 'Morghespeche.' In the time of Edward IV the admissions to the Gild became very rare¹. The business ordinarily transacted was the election of two bailiffs by the 'senescalli' (during and after the reign of Edward IV by the 'senescalli' and the retiring bailiffs) from four candidates named by the 'twenty-four forewardmen'². Lists of these 'forewardmen' are occasionally given³. At the meetings held during the reign of Edward IV and his successors, besides the election of bailiffs, Liber A* records allotments of 'common acres' and market-stalls, and makes occasional reference to the accounts of the two chamberlains.

The following passages are of special interest:—

ndeuer. 'Morwspech tenta ibidem die veneris proxima post festum Sancti Michaelis Archangeli anno regni Regis Henrici quinti tercio.

ANSWER.

to 2-3 Philip and Mary, but only very few of the entries are of the period preceding the reign of Henry VI, and more than half the volume (ff. 15-44) relates to the reign of Henry VIII. The Manelequium was generally held annually on Sunday before Michaelmas-day. The election of officers and the leasing of stalls, lands and tenements constituted the most prominent business transacted at these meetings. The entries of admission to the Gild almost wholly disappear in the sixteenth century. During this period there was only one steward, who was often a knight. The governing council was still called the twenty-four (the 'xxiiii^{or},' the 'xxiiii^{or}. probi homines,' or the 'xxiiii^{or}. de corporacione')¹. Two constables now regularly appear among the officers elected. Like Liber A*, the earlier portions of this volume were probably compiled from the old Gild Rolls, while the later portions are probably contemporary records of the Manelequium meetings².

The following are the admissions to the Gild in the sixteenth century :—

fol. 33 b.

13 Henry VIII.—'Thomas Carpynter, Shomaker, venit et petit admitti de Societate gyldanorum ville predicte.' He is admitted for a fee of 26s. 8d.

A.D. 1529.
fol. 37 b.

21 Henry VIII.—'Ad hunc diem Rob. Colwell petit admitti in Societatem Gildanorum predictorum, et pro diuersis considerationibus Senescallo, Balliuis et xxiv^{or}. predictis mouentibus admissus est in Societatem libertatis Gilde predicte.' He pays 6s. 8d., 'et juratus est.'

A.D. 1555.
fol. 56 b.

2-3 Philip and Mary :—

'Robertus Bakehouse } electi sunt in gildam mercatoriam et Thomas Frankelyn } jurati.

Willielmus Golde electus est in Gildam mercatoriam.'

² On fol. 1 of Liber A is this note—'Iste liber continet xliiii^{or}. folia xxiiii^{or}. die Septembris anno regni regis Henrici VIII^{mi} xxxv^{to}., tempore [the names of the Steward and two Bailiffs].' Another note on the same page says that the book contained 56 leaves, April 13, 1582.

Supplementary Proofs and Illustrations. 347

Liber B of the Maneloquium Books¹, 'The Lydger of the Towne of Andeuere,' extends from 2-3 Philip and Mary to 1674. 'Maneloquium ibidem tentum,' etc., 'At this Morrowspeach it is agreed,' etc., are the headings of the transactions down to April 5, 1622 (fol. 142), after which date they are superseded by 'Curia siue Convocatio Communis Consilii ibidem tenta,' etc., 'At this Courte it is ordered,' etc., 'At this Common Councell it is agreed,' etc. The governing body is no longer called 'the twenty-four,' or 'the forewardmen,' but simply the 'probi homines,' or the 'approved men.' Their number varies from five to eighteen, never exceeding twelve in the seventeenth century. After December 10, 1598 (41 Eliz.), a subordinate council of from six to twelve burgesses ('burgenses') appears. The officers elected at the meetings after 41 Elizabeth are one bailiff, two justices and two constables². A sub-steward is occasionally mentioned. Besides the election of officers, the transactions relate mainly to the renting and supervision of the property of the corporation. Orders concerning the regulation of trade are almost wholly wanting³.

ANDOVER.

The following are the only passages in which the 'Gild Merchant' is mentioned:—

'Item, that John Peterson the younger shalbe free of the Guylde of Marchants of the said Towne, paying therfore to th'use of the Chamber v.s.' A.D. 1556.
fol. 5.

'Item, it is agreed that John Harbord shalbe admitted into the ffellowshipp of the guylde of marchants of the said towne, and doth geve for a fyne iii.s.' fol. 6.

'Johannes West, Will. Hussey et Rob. Walker electi sunt in societatem guilde marcatorie, et iurati.' A.D. 1562.
fol. 16.

¹ A paper volume (12 by 8 inches), bound in leather, containing 357 pages (182 leaves).

² The changes that appear in 41 Eliz. were probably due to the grant of a new charter. Under date of Sept. 11, 40 Eliz. we read: 'This year the 21 of May wase the chartar and lybarties of this towne newly conffermed and granted, 41 Elizabeth' (fol. 103).

ANDOVER. 'Johannes Hanson et Thomas Roffe electi sunt in societatem — guilde marcatorie.'

A.D. 1563. 'Petrus Hopkyns electus est in societatem gilde marcatorie, et fol. 18. iuratus.'

A.D. 1565. 'Arthurus Bolde electus est in gildam marcatoriam, et iuratus.'
fol. 22.

A.D. 1566. 'Item, at this morowspeache yt is agreed that Nicholas Peckat fol. 24. shalbe admitted into the ffellowshippe into the guylde of marchants of the sayed Towe, and doth geve for a ffyne vi.s. viii.d.'

A.D. 1567. 'Thomas Morell electus est in gildam marcatoriam, et Juratus.
fol. 26. —Edwardus Thurman electus est in gildam marcatoriam, et Juratus.'

A.D. 1568. 'Johannes Knight electus est in gildam marcatoriam, et fol. 28. Juratus.'

A.D. 1570. 'Ad hunc Maneloquium Nicholaus Venables iuratus est in fol. 30. gildam marcatoriam.'

Almost all of those thus admitted to the Gild appear, after their election, in the lists of approved men.

In the seventeenth century there are many entries similar to the following :—

A.D. 1585. 'Ad hoc maneloquium, per consensum Balliuorum et Proborum fol. 78. Hominum, Johannes Smythe et Joh. Pyle electi sunt in numerum et societatem proborum hominum de Andever, et iurati sunt per Senescallum ¹.'

A.D. 1608. 'Willielmus Smyth generosus electus est in numero proborum fol. 112. hominum, et Juratus.'

Will. Blake et Thomas Stamford electi sunt in numero Burgen-sium, et predictus Thomas Stamford Juratus est ².'

A.D. 1617. 'Edwardus Thurman et Radulphus South electi sunt Burgenses.'
fol. 135. On fol. 151 is this passage :—

A.D. 1625. 'It is agreed by the Common Councill there that the style and orders made for the goverment of the thre Companies of this Towe shalbe perved and made accordinge to our nowe Charter,

² This is the earliest of such admissions to the number of the Burgesses.

The minutes of the Haberdashers' Company from March 12, 1715 to March 17, 1807, are still in existence¹. Most of the entries refer to the election of officers, the admission of new members and the accounts of the chamberlains of the Company. After the names of the officers in 1715 and the freeman's oath we find the following :—

'The Particular Trades fixed by the Old Orders to every of ye 3 Companys.

ANDOVER.

The following was enacted on October 23, 1733:—

— 'It is agreed by this Society this day met that the Chamberlayns of this Company Doe forthwith pay to the Master-Warden thereof the Sum of Seventeen pounds, part of the Stock in hand of this Company, to advise with Council and for other purposes towards trying the right of Electing a Bayliff for the Borough of Andover aforesaid, And also the right of chusing Two Burgesses To represent the said Borough in the next Parliament, it being presumed that the freemen of the Company have Votes for such Bayliff and Burgesses.'

There are many entries similar to the subjoined:—

Nov. 3, 1760.

'Mr. Jere Bunny, Grocer and Haberdasher, having been frequently warned to take up his Freedom in this Company, to which he properly belongs, and having refused so to do, and he continuing to keep his Shop open and Exercise his trade in Contempt of the Ancient Orders of this Fraternity, without having Compounded for his freedom, it is Unanimously ordered that the proper Officers do immediately Levy upon the said Jere Bunny's Goods and Chatties the Sum of Forty Shillings, being the Fine mentioned in the said Orders for that purpose for the Use of this Company, and that the said Officers be Indemnified by the Company for so doing.'

The following is the last entry in the Haberdashers' Book:—

Company of Haberdashers.

'At a Meeting of the said Company, held at the Guildhall in Andover on Monday the seventeenth day of March, 1807. . . Several Persons who have come to set up their Trades in the Town, having been summoned to take up their freedom in this Company, into which in respect of such Trades they are properly admissible, and such persons having contemptuously neglected and refused to appear to take up their freedoms therein, and the Members of the said Company present at this Meeting, thinking it proper to vindicate and support the rights of the Company, deem it advisable in the first instance to take the opinion of some Counsel on the validity of their ancient Orders, and their institution under them as at present existing, and how far they have a power to compel the admission of Persons refusing to become free of the Company.

ANDOVER.

It is ordered that the Register prepare as full a case upon the point as he shall judge necessary, and take the opinion of Mr. Burrough, or any other Counsel he may choose, thereon, the expence of preparing which as well as the fee of the Counsel to be paid him by the Chamberlains out of the fund in their hands.

And the Members present who make this order are [14 names].'

Perhaps this was the death-gasp of the Company. At all events it must have ceased to exist within a few years afterwards, which is likewise true of the other Companies of Andover.

CARDIFF.

A.D. 1341.

In 15 Edward III Hugh le Despenser granted a charter to the burgesses of Cardiff, from which we extract the following :—

'Et quod nullus Extraneus extra nundinas vel forum infra bundas predictas aliquas mercandisas de aliquo extraneo emat, nisi tantum de Burgensibus nostris eiusdem ville, preter gentiles homines Glamorgancie pro victualibus eorum, et non racione mercandise; nec aliquis teneat celdam apertam de aliquibus mercandisis nec tabernam, nec corffe faciet in villa nostra predicta, nisi fuerit cum predictis Burgensibus nostris lotans et scotans et infra guldam libertatis eorum receptus. Necnon concessimus eisdem Burgensibus nostris quod ipsi et heredes sui guldam inter eos facere possent quo tempore et quandocumque voluerint ad proficuum ipsorum. . . . Insuper concessimus prefatis Burgensibus nostris quod omnes mercatores, tam pannarii, cerdone, pelliparii, cirotecarii quam alii diuersi qui ex vendicione et empcione viuant infra dominium nostrum Glamorgancie et Morgancie, residere debeant in villis de Burgh et non vpland, et quod omnimodas mercandisas faciant in Nundinis, fforis et in villis de Burgh, et non alibi. Et etiam quod omnes mercatores cum eorum mercandisis

They are also granted power yearly to elect a master and two

CHESTER. wardens to govern the said mystery; they are to have perpetual succession and a common seal; to hold lands, tenements, etc.; to plead in courts of law. The newly appointed master and wardens are to take their oath of office before the mayor and aldermen of the city. But hereafter the master and wardens are to take the oath before those whom they are superseding in office. The Society can make laws and ordinances for its government, and can provide for their due execution without the interference of royal officers or ministers, provided that they are in accordance with the royal prerogative and the laws of the realm, and not prejudicial to the mayor of Chester. No craftsman or other person of the city is to resort to merchandise in foreign parts, unless admitted to the Society, excepting those who have been apprenticed to the said mystery or have used it seven years, under penalty of forfeiting to the society £20 for each offence. This grant is not to prejudice the rights of the crown, the laws of the land, the privileges of the mayor or of any other corporations, nor to interfere with the franchises of the governor, assistants and Society of Merchant Adventurers frequenting Spain, Holland, Zeeland, Brabant and Flanders.—(Record Office, Patent Roll 1 Mary, pars 12, mem. 12.)

A.D. 1554.

The same charter was again granted to the Merchant Adventurers of Chester in the year 1 Elizabeth. An ancient transcript of Elizabeth's grant in the British Museum (MS. Harley 2054, ff. 46-47) is headed 'The Marchaunts Chartre,' and contains, among other marginal notes, the words 'mersers to be free.'

A.D. 1559.

This is followed, in the Harleian MS. (ff. 47-49) by a charter of 26 Elizabeth to 'ye mere marchantes, ffree Citizens inhabytyng within our Citie of Chestre, vsyng onely ye feate of merchandizes by ventrynge by Sea, and sale in grosse and not by retaylynge, and now beinge members of ye bodye Corporate of ye President, Assistants and fellowshipp of marchantes of Spayne and Portyn-gale,' allowing them to export calf-skins from Chester¹.

EXETER.

The Merchant Adventurers of Exeter received another royal A.D. 1560. grant dated June 17th, 2 Elizabeth. It contains most of the provisions of the patent of 1 Elizabeth (above pp. 87–89). It incorporates them by the name of the ‘Governor, Consulls and Societie of Marchantes Adventurers of the Citie of Excester trafficking the realme of ffraunce and dominions of the ffrenche kinge.’ No one is to ship merchandise to France or import any wares from the latter, except members of the Company. A handicraftsman must abandon his occupation or mystery on being admitted into the Society.—(Cotton, An Elizabethan Guild, 1–10.)¹

On July 1st, 1560, twenty-seven assistants are mentioned; and later we also meet with a Beadle, a Clerk and a Treasurer.—(Ibid., 12, 16.)

Subjoined is ‘The Othe to be mynstered to every one which is and shall be made free of the Companye of the Marchantes Adventures of the Citie of Exester’ :—

‘Youe shall swere youe shalbe good and trewe to our Sovereigne Ladye the Quenes Highnes, Ladye Elizabeth by the Grace of God Quene of England, France and Irland, defender of the faithe, &c., and to her heires and successors Kinges and Quenes of Englande. SCARBOROUGH.

A.D. 1253. A royal charter of 37 Henry III states that former kings of England had granted to the burgesses of Scarborough the liberties of York. To give greater security to the said grants, those liberties are now specified. The burgesses are to be quit of toll, lastage and other customs throughout the King's dominions; to levy distress for debts due them; to defend themselves in all appeals by the oaths of thirty-six burgesses; to hold the town at fee-farm, paying £66 annually. 'Concedimus eciam et confirmavimus eisdem Burgensibus omnes libertates, leges et consuetudines suas, et nominatim Gildam suam mercatoriam et hansas suas in Anglia et Normannia, et lastagia sua per totam costam maris quieta; et quod predictas leges et consuetudines habeant et teneant cum omnibus libertatibus predictae Gilde sue et hansis suis pertinentibus.'

This charter was confirmed by grants of 5 Edward II, 22 Edward III and 1 Richard II.—(Record Office, Patent Roll 1 Richard II, pars 2, mem. 13-14.)
